B.C. ferries to get new boss

By JAKE BANKY

The corporate carpet has been yanked out from under B.C. Ferry Corp. general manager Charles Gallagher by Transportation Minster Alex Fraser.

The minister announced a decision to hire a full-time board chairman who will take over-all responsibility for the Crown corporation.

The effect will be to limit seriously the free hand Gallagher has had in running the service.

Gallagher wasn't in his Victoria office today and he wasn't returning phone calls.

Fraser, the current chairman, will retain his seat on the board as government representative.

The minister indicated the decision was in part a response to Gallagher's handling of problems within the corporation.

But he denied that it was a slap in the face for Gallagher.

"We are very satisfied with Mr. Gallagher. We're trying to give him help and the board help by hiring a working chairman."

Asked about his reported dissatisfaction with the general manager over continuing poor labor relations in the B.C. Ferry Corp. Fraser replied:

"I haven't said that. I've heard that, but I haven't said that."

The Vancouver Province earlier quoted Fraser as saying the move was partly due to Gallagher's handling of his ferry duties.

"There've been terrific problems for the corporation, yes," Fraser said.

The newspaper also quoted one source close to Fraser as saying the minister spent more time with ferry employees than Gallagher and that the minister and other directors were unhappy with Gallagher's tough attitude towards both union and non-union ferry workers.

Other sources cited unhappiness with Gallagher's implementation of a management team concept as yet another reason for the decision to hire an outsider.

Fraser said the new chairman will deal with policy while Gallagher will continue in charge of operations, said Fraser.

"It's my understanding that in the industry, Mr. Gallagher is considered the best operator on the Pacific coast — as far as an operator is concerned."

The minister had no word on who will get the top job in the corporation.

He said a short list of candidates has been prepared but he hasn't seen it yet.

He would not confirm that Halifax lawyer J. Graham Day, a man with extensive experience in shipping and transportation, is at the top of the list.

Fraser, meanwhile, has given the city of Victoria more representation on the ferry corporation's board with the appointment of Ald. Bob Wright and former mayor Mike Young as directors.

The board now has representatives who live in Victoria, Vancouver, the Sechelt peninsula and Prince Rupert.

"I think we have the best-rounded board that we've ever had," Fraser said.

Franklin with photographic clue

Ted Franklin almost fell off his chair Wednesday when he read the Times.

The reason? A photo that helped him track down a long-lost childhood chum he hadn't heard from for nearly 60 years.

Franklin, 68, of 2143 Granite, said he got the surprise of his life when he read the caption under the photo of a piglet nosing out two pups for a meal on its surrogate mother, a collie dog.

The caption said the animals belonged to Uda Davis, a Silverdale, Wash., hog farmer.

To Franklin there could be only one Uda Davis.

He had to be a member of the Davis family which had a farm next to his family's near Lewistown, Montana, between 1919-1921.

The clue was the first name — all of the seven Davis children were given three-letter christian names ending in 'a.'

But Franklin wasn't sure until he phoned that night.

"Do you remember a boy named Terrence Franklin?" he asked.

"Do I," came the reply. "We used to chase gophers together."

A reunion is planned this summer.

Williams denies it's different law for Indian hunters

Attorney-General Allan Williams denied today that a directive he issued on Indian fishing and hunting violations amounts to interference with the justice system.

Crown prosecutors have been told not to proceed with charges against native Indians who fish and hunt out of season, except on direct instructions from the attorney-general's office.

"Everybody complains I'm interfering with the justice system. I'm only trying to make certain that in these cases, justice is served."

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers, who is responsible for fish and wildlife, says he is surprised Williams never told him of the directive.

Senior members of the Fish and Wildlife Branch, meanwhile, are talking angrily of continuing to lay charges against anyone — Indian or white — who violates the Wildlife Act.

"With all the present controversy about the judicial system this looks bad, considering the ethic that the law should treat everyone equally," said one official.

But Williams brushed these complaints aside, saying his directive deals only with administration of affairs within his own ministry.

He said the problem arises when a native Indian shoots an animal or hooks a fish out of season without holding a special permit which allows Indians to take game year-round for food purposes.

"His tendency is to take the animal and not worry about the permit," Williams said.

"I think this can be resolved in many cases by some significant changes in the permit system."

Vancouver landlords charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two west end landlords were charged Thursday with 145 counts of unlawfully increasing rents.

The charges, which involve 30 suites in three apartment blocks, result from raids rentalsman officers made last month on Aquilini Construction and Zen G Construction, Rentalsman Jim Patterson said.

It is the first time the Rentalsman has ever tried to prosecute a landlord for illegal rents.

Patterson said he wants to let landlords who illegally increase rents beyond the seven-per-cent allowed under rent controls know they could face stiff penalties.

"I'm attempting to make it clear that a greater liability than simply paying back rent exists," he said.

Patterson said he also has pointed out to the provincial government that rent controls of seven per cent are below the current inflation rate of 10 per cent.

Luigi Aquilini, president of Aquilini Construction, wouldn't comment, and nobody at Zen G Construction was available.

CBC sticks to its guns

CBC regional director Len Lauk said today the corporation will not back down on its story that Deputy Attorney-General Dick Vogel interfered with the justice process in three court cases.

"After reviewing our program and the statements made in the house, we stand by our story," he said.

Vogel, who was cleared after an investigation conducted by Attorney-General Allan Williams, has announced he is suing the CBC and reporter Chris Bird for libel.

One man's futile fight against debt collector

By WALTER STEWART
FP News Service

OTTAWA — The telephone rang in my Ottawa apartment early on the morning of Jan. 25, and a voice asked if I was Walter Stewart.

Guilty.

"Then you owe the Royal Bank $202.39," said the voice, whose owner represented an Ottawa collection agency.

I told him he had the wrong customer. He wanted to know if I had ever lived in Winnipeg, and when I said I had not, he wanted to know if I worked for a news service. I do, and he said, "I have information that you are the Walter Stewart who owes this money."

I said: "Then you have the wrong information," and hung up.

At first, it seemed funny, but then my wife pointed out that if I had a collecton agency on my tail, my credit might be impaired. So I sat down and wrote a stern letter to Rowland Frazee, president of the Royal Bank in Montreal, asking how I got on his hit list.

On Feb. 15, Frazee replied that he "appreciated" my writing to him (I'll bet) and that I would hear from him "as soon as I have received a report."

I have not yet heard.

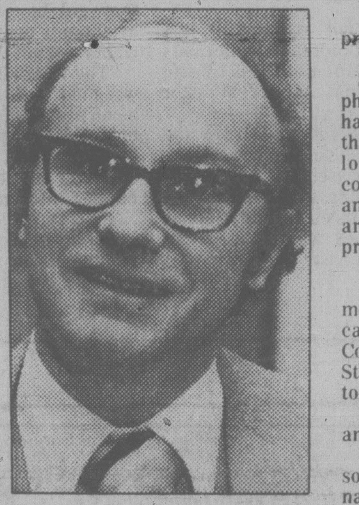
A few minutes after I put this letter down, I got another call from the collector, who identified himself as "Mr. Kerr, with Financial Collection Agencies" and who wanted me to pay up forthwith. I told him again that he had the wrong chap, and he asked if I worked for "EP News Service."

I said, "No, FP."

He said, "Whatever," and went on to repeat that he had information that I was the same Walter Stewart who had beaten the bank out of 200 bucks.

I raised my voice in denial. He said, "I guess we're going to have to settle this in front of a judge," and I said that suited me just fine.

I demanded to see whatever material he had from the Royal Bank, but he would say nothing more. So I wrote Frazee again, and wrote Kerr, and wrote my lawyer, and told them all that I was the victim of a bum rap, and I wanted it cleared up.



Stewart

My lawyer told me that the only way I could clear my name was to sue. That seemed silly; this was a simple case of mistaken identity which could be resolved by a letter. But my lawyer was right.

Two weeks later, when I still hadn't heard anything, I went over to the Ottawa Credit Bureau — there is such a bureau in every major city — to see whether I had a black mark on my file.

I filled out the required form ("Reason for Interview: Threatening phone call from collection agency") and was told that "Credit-wise, you're flawless."

That was nice.

I phoned the public affairs department of the Royal Bank in Montreal and asked to talk to someone who could explain how their collection system worked, how it got me confused with someone else and — most importantly — how other Canadians were going to be protected from mixups as we move deeper into the web of computer-stored data.

Press officer Robert Racine promised to get right back to me.

But he didn't.

Six days later, on March 18, I phoned again, and he said that he had passed my request on, and that I should have been contacted long since. I said that I was coming to Montreal on March 28, and would be grateful if he could arrange an interview for me. He promised to get right back to me.

But he didn't.

On March 19 — nearly two months from the original phone call — I went around to Financial Collection Agencies on Metcalfe St. in downtown Ottawa and asked to see Kerr.

He was produced, looking young and nervous. Ian Kerr, collector.

He told me that the whole episode was "a mixup". A man with a name similar to mine had gotten onto the Royal Bank's bad books in Winnipeg with an overdraft, and the bank had turned the case over to his company there, with a note that this man, a consultant, wrote for newspapers as a freelancer, and might be in Ottawa. He said there were "a lot of similarities" between myself and this man, but couldn't say what they were.

As we talked in the lobby of the FCA offices, I could hear other collectors on the phones in the background.

"What's the matter?" one man was saying, "You on welfare?"

Another growled into a telephone: "Just because they're grinding on you, don't try to grind on me."

Must be fun work.

Kerr said he was sorry if he had been offensive on the telephone and sorry for the mistake. He said he had written to the bank in Winnipeg after he got my letter — when it apparently began to penetrate that he had the wrong man — and in a subsequent phone conversation, the loans officer there had suggested "it wasn't worth it" to keep after me for such a small amount.

I asked, "Then you mean they still think I'm a deadbeat?"

Canada's auto deficit hits $3B

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's automotive products trade deficit soared to $3.1 billion in 1979 from $600 million in 1978, Statistics Canada said Thursday.

The dramatic increase came from a five-per-cent drop in exports of automotive products to $11.4 billion and a 15 per cent rise in imports to $14.5 billion.

Meanwhile, Industry minister Herb Gray said today he will meet soon with the U.S. presidents of the big three auto makers as a prelude to formal talks with the U.S. government on the auto pact.

He said he wants to get new commitments from the car makers on increased parts production and more research and development in this country.

While he gave no date for the talks, the minister said he hopes to give formal notice to Washington by May or June. U.S. officials have already expressed opposition to renegotiation of the 1965 bilateral free trade agreement on production of new cars, trucks and parts in North America.

Gray also said he expects to meet Employment and Immigration Minister Lloyd Axworthy today or next week to study possible federal aid to unemployed car industry workers, indefinitely laid off at Chrysler Canada Ltd., Windsor, Ont., and elsewhere in the industry. An estimated 17,000 of 95,000 workers are currently without work. Some have been forced to take welfare after their unemployment insurance benefits expired.

Battle of the cats nearly over

CALGARY (CP) — Bonnie Roddis' two-year fight to keep five exotic cats she's cared for since 1975 has come to an end.

Mrs. Roddis was told Thursday by the Alberta fish and wildlife department intends to remove two tigers, a lion, a jaguar and a cougar — animals she says are her family's pets — from her care immediately.

The Calgary woman has been battling with the province since 1978 when the fish and wildlife department learned she was harboring the cats illegally.

The province took possession of the cats in 1979 but allowed Mrs. Roddis to keep them as a custodian for the court, provided she could meet the requirements for a game farm permit. Mrs. Roddis has moved twice in the past year in an effort to find suitable land.

"I know I can't win now," she said tearfully. "The province never intended to let me keep these animals. They were just playing games.

"But I'll tell you one thing, I'll shoot those cats before I let them die of loneliness in some strange cage."

Her husband, Alan, a city veterinarian, stood by with a .357 magnum revolver strapped to his belt. He indicated he would use the gun to kill the animals before wildlife officials could load them onto a truck.

In anticipation of the officials' arrival at their acreage, the Roddises set up a barricade at the front entrance.

Gordon Kerr, assistant deputy minister of fish and wildlife, said officials were dispatched to the acreage Thursday and attempted to persuade the Roddises to co-operate with an order for the cats' removal.

"They refused and I can't say yet what our next step will be," he said. "But we've determined that the facilities at her acreage are inadequate and are a hazard to public safety.

"We aren't playing games. We've done everything possible over the last year to help her keep the cats. We've extended deadlines and granted her a number of concessions. However, our conditions have not been met. We've been misled."

Floating bank rate 'recession recipe'

OTTAWA (UPC) — With the Bank of Canada interest rate at a record 14.79 per cent, Opposition MPs are calling the situation a recipe for disaster.

The central bank, in its second instalment of floating interest rates, established the record level Thursday by placing the bank rate 0.25 per cent higher than the average 14.54 per cent received in tendered 91-day treasury bills.

Most major chartered banks said they did not expect any increase in prime rates this week, or that they had their rates under review.

Finance Minister Allan MacEachen defended the increase during a late afternoon news conference, saying the system of floating rates protected Canadians against even larger increases.

"The use of the floating rate . . . has probably resulted in the smallest possible increase in the bank rate, consistent in holding down inflation," he told reporters.

However, MacEachen said he did not know how high rates will go. "It's difficult to know when the end will be.

NDP finance critic Bob Rae said the Liberal government was suffering from a "crisis of integrity" for changing its policies after the election. He demanded the government order bank Governor Gerald Bouey to change his position.

"The bank's policies are a recipe for recession," he said. "I don't recall his policies being upheld by the Canadian people."

Conservative MP Bill Jarvis demanded Bouey and MacEachen appear before a Parliamentary committee to justify the floating interest rate immediately after Parliament opens next month.

"Only a few months ago, economists were predicting interest rates were going to drop by mid-summer and now some banks are proposing six-month mortgages," said the former cabinet minister.

"I am sure there are Canadians who want to know if these predictions are still valid.

ney-general states: "The intent is to ensure that an Indian who is following the traditional pursuit of taking game for himself and his family can do so without fear of prosecution as long as subsistence is his sole purpose."

Williams suggested some wildlife officers tend to be hard on Indians while others are not.

"In some areas, there are no problems because wildlife officers exercise wise discretion. In other areas, there are problems. It's seems to be a matter of personality."

The order should not be considered a ban on all prosecutions of Indians for hunting and fishing violations, said Williams.

"If there are Indians who are taking game and it's clearly unlawful, then prosecutions will go ahead."

But these cases are expensive, he said, particularly since many of them go all the way to the Supreme Court of Canada, where they get bogged down in arguments over aboriginal rights and get thrown out.

"The instructions I gave were not that there should be no prosecutions but that before a charge is laid by Crown counsel the matter be referred to associate deputy attorney-general Neil McDiarmid so he can make an assessment as to the likelihood of the success of the charge."

More bus passes

The provincial government will expand its bus pass program for seniors and handicapped persons to all communities in the province served by the Urban Transit Authority, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said today.

He also said the government will encourage the Greater Vancouver Regional District not to place restrictions on when persons can use the passes.

The human resources ministry underwrites the cost of the passes by paying the Vancouver and Victoria regional districts — the only cities where the passes currently are available — $50 a year for each pass holder.

One man's futile fight

He couldn't say.

"If the money involved was larger, would you still be after me?"

"Draw your own conclusions."

He also said he realized he might have the wrong man because my Social Insurance Number didn't gibe with the one they had — which was, in fact, issued in Manitoba.

I said I thought SIN numbers were not for credit checks, but for limited government use. Kerr replied, "Would you rather have me still hassling you, or using the SIN number?"

In short, because the bank and or his agency made a blunder, I was harassed, but because the amount involved wasn't worth pursuing, I was off the hook.

Suppose the money was more, I suggested, and I was sued for it; wouldn't my credit be ruined for the months or years that took to settle? In those circumstances, surely it would make sense for me to pay up — even though I didn't owe a penny?

Kerr said he realized that "the way the system works isn't fair."

That was a comfort.

So I telephoned the Winnipeg bank and spoke to Don Ledwos, the loans officer, who told me that I became involved because of a "strange set of circumstances."

"The fellow was a consultant in Ottawa and was a freelancer writing for newspapers from time to time."

I said I was not a consultant and not a freelancer, had only recently returned to Ottawa and to writing for newspapers. I also had a different Ottawa address than the one in the bank's file.

Ledwos said the bank had not made any mistake, but perhaps the collection agency had.

I suggested that one problem was that the agency was getting such a small amount to chase me (33 per cent of the debt, or a grand total of $67.46 if it collected) that it didn't pay them to make sure they had the right victim. Ledwos agreed.

Since his bank had gotten me into this, I said, I wanted to know what they were going to do to get me out.

Ledwos said, "Nothing." He had had a letter from Kerr in Ottawa (in which the collector said that my letter to the bank was "neither fair nor accurate" and that he hoped the bank wasn't sore at him because I had "over-reacted" in "unfounded anger."

I wondered if Rowland Frazee was called a deadbeat whether he would react in unfounded anger.

On the basis of Kerr's letter, Ledwos had decided that "For $200, it wasn't worth the hassle to pursue you any further . . . I can't prove that you are the right Walter Stewart, but I have no proof that you aren't either."

I said he could damn soon get proof, but for Ledwos, the whole case "wasn't worth it", and he seemed surprised that I thought it was.

In any event, the Royal Bank had done nothing wrong; it simply turned over a bad account to a collection agency, and whatever happened after that was no concern of the bank.

I argued that his firm had some responsibility whether the amount involved was large or small, and invited him to (a) determine that I was the right person and sue me or (b) determine that I was not, and advise me to that effect.

Ledwos couldn't do either, because the amount involved didn't justify any further expense. He still has a file on Walter Stewart, deadbeat, but he's sure that if I applied for a loan, I could prove I was not the bum who goes around stiffing banks.

So here I am, two months after this business began, still waiting to hear from the boys at head office, still sore, still wondering why the Royal calls itself "The Friendly Bank."

I can sue them, I suppose; they won't sue me, not because they think I'm okay, but because they can't prove I'm a crook, and they can't be bothered to find out.

Banks are huge, dominant institutions, getting larger and more dominant every day. Credit data is becoming more widespread and more important, and the kind of blunder I found myself trapped in is likely to become more common.

If I can be hassled — I am not a shy man — what happens to more timid Canadians? How many, wrongly handed a collection agency bill pay up because, in Don Ledwos' memorable words, it isn't "worth it" to do anything else?

On March 28, as advertised, I will present myself in the offices of the Royal Bank in Montreal to seek some answers. I'll let you know what happens.

Shopping centre overkill strangling Nanaimo

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

NANAIMO (CP) — Like embarrassed guests who arrive early and find their hostess still soaking in the bathtub, the national department stores have landed with a thud on Nanaimo's doorstep.

This Vancouver Island community of 44,400 is confidently looking forward to an economic boom that will bring free-spending workers flocking into shops and malls. The trouble is that the shopping malls arrived well before the boom.

Already the city has 16 square feet of retail space per person, four times the national average. And two more major shopping centres are coming.

Local market analysts calculate, on the basis that stores nationally need annual sales of $380 a square foot to break even, that a Nanaimo family of four will have to spend $19,200 a year in the stores for everyone to avoid losses. That spending would be over and above the family's expenditure on rent, fuel, insurance and similar costs.

City statistics show more than 2.2 million square feet of existing, planned or proposed shopping-centre space. That total, which excludes independent stores represents more than 50 square feet for each city resident and more than 35 for the 61,900 in the primary trading area.

Advertising salesmen who have to pry money out of the older downtown merchants report that "local merchants don't have two cents to rub together."

At least one bank branch manager is tightening credit, guarding against a possible epidemic of small-business failures.

In an interview, Mayor Frank Ney said the rush of shopping-centre developers was clearly "overkill."

City council debated whether to delay some projects but decided on a 5-to-4 vote to welcome everyone and let the free market sort things out.

Ney, who voted with the minority, said the smaller stores are his concern since "the big majors will survive."

The mayor, however, emphatically refuses to take an "I told you so" attitude. "Now that the decision has been made, I don't want to look at things negatively," he said. "I want to look at things positively."

And, he continued, there is plenty of room in Nanaimo for positive thinking.

The city, indeed, has a broad base of existing and potential economic activity:

—A pulp mill provides a $30-million annual payroll, with many workers getting $24,000. Several sawmills are operating and large new forest-products plants are scheduled to accompany development of the Duke Point harbor and industrial park.

—Some 400 commercial fishermen are enjoying high revenues. The marine-oriented city, which has one boat for every three people, welcomed a new fish processing plant in 1979 and will get another this year.

—Massive coal developments in the interior of Vancouver Island should provide an economic boost later this decade.

—Nanaimo's role as a port is expected to mushroom as Duke Point is developed and as facilities across the strait in Vancouver become jammed.

—Relatively low house prices and rainfall should attract more retired persons.

—A federal biological research station, an army base and one of British Columbia's five major hospitals provide hundreds more jobs.

Lack of congestion around Nanaimo, Ney said, means the city has less reason for environmental concern and can attract petroleum storage facilities rejected by Victoria and general industry crowded out of Vancouver:

"The environmentalists have put out the no-welcome sign and I think you'll find more and more industry from the mainland will move over here.

"We have all the facilities here. We have the water to supply a town three times bigger . . .

"We're all geared up to go."

BAA, BAA, BLACK GOAT: These pigmy kidds are only a day old but they produce plenty of volume as they send up a chorus of baas at Jim Nebone of Surrey, who supplies animals for the Stanley Park zoo in Vancouver. Nebone says the baby goats, which grown to a maximum of 18 inches, are very rare and are worth about $250 each. The goats are natives of Africa.

Motorcycle jump fatal, jury rules

NANAIMO (CP) — A 15-year-old boy drowned March 1 after he lost control of his motorcycle while crossing a creek near here, an inquest jury ruled Thursday.

The jury was told that Jason Gohn of Nanaimo tried to jump his motorcycle over the stream but applied the brakes, apparently when he thought he would not be able to make it, and lost control in the incident March 1.

An RCMP officer testified he saw Gohn driving the motorcycle in a school yard earlier and pursued him. But Gohn escaped by entering an inaccessible area.

No poison, Grey Owl's widow urges

VANCOUVER (CP) — The widow of writer and conservationist Grey Owl has urged a provincial pesticide control appeal board to prevent the use of the poison Compound 1080 to kill wolves and coyotes in B.C.

Anahareo Grey Owl of Kamloops said in a letter to the board that "it is quite astounding that . . . the only solution the authorities can come up with is the barbaric, antiquated, inevitable poison."

The letter was read aloud Thursday at a public hearing.

B.C. fish and wildlife branch has been issued a permit to use the poison sodium monofluoracetate (Compound 1080) for five years to kill wolves and coyotes where they are suspected of killing cattle and sheep.

Vancouver lawyer defends baby ads

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city lawyer said Thursday there is nothing immoral or illegal in an advertisement he placed in the city's two daily newspapers asking mothers of unborn babies to contact his office on behalf of clients he says wish to adopt a child.

But a human resources spokesman, questioned about the ad, was not so sure about its content.

The Vancouver Sun and Province both carried the ad under the heading: Private Adoption Opportunity.

The ad said: "Our clients wish to adopt a child. If you are pregnant and wish to place your baby for adoption, our clients are prepared to pay your pre-natal expenses and to assure a first class home for the child."

The message was followed by a business address, postal code and telephone number.

"We aren't doing anything immoral or illegal," Joel Kerbel said in an interview. "Our forms and procedures are identical in every way to those of the human resources department.

"My clients aren't buying a baby on the black market. They are not going to do it illegally."

Asked what he anticipated the "pre-natal expenses" mentioned in the ad would be, Kerbel said: "My clients aren't buying an unborn. They are looking for an opportunity to adopt a child."

Marolin Dahl, manager of family and children's services with the human resources ministry, said she was aware of Kerbel's ad.

Both Ms. Dahl and Kerbel pointed out the stringent government regulations governing the adoption of children in B.C.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Thursday in Victoria she is shocked by the ad and has asked deputy minister John Noble to investigate.

Run-down greeting in store

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cruise ship passengers will get a look at the seedier part of the city this summer when they arrive because the former facilities are being converted to a new convention centre.

The estimated 150,000 passengers expected on a record 156 ships will disembark at two ancient cargo sheds in east-end Vancouver until the 1982 season.

One small step for seaman, a giant step for citizenship

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tadeusz Jakubowski, the Polish seaman who has been trying to become a Canadian citizen since jumping a Polish factory ship here in October, 1977, took a short — but important — step toward his goal Thursday.

He went to Blaine, Wash.

Jakubowski, who was granted a special ministerial permit allowing him to remain in Canada two days before he was supposed to leave, was issued a court order to first leave the country before he could pick up the permit.

So he and his friend Jerzy Mazurek, who translates for Jakubowski, drove across the border south of Vancouver Thursday morning, received a permit to enter the U.S., and spent an hour "at a fast-food place" in Blaine before returning to the Canadian side of the border.

"We returned to the Canadian side of the border," Mazurek said, "and reported to Canadian immigration authorities at the crossing and the minister's permit was waiting for us.

Shy boaters

Proximity to one of the best marine playgrounds in North America is an attractive aspect of life on southern Vancouver Island.

Salt water fishing, cruising, sailing and diving are on the doorstep of the 220,000 residents of Greater Victoria. To a certain extent, the privilege is free for the taking and some 20 per cent of those residents do so. And as the population grows, so does the number of boat owners.

Because of a lack of moorage space, however, there may be a limit to the number of residents able to own boats in the future.

The unhappy aspect of boating is paying for a berth. Marinas are expensive, but the cost is far outweighed by the security of knowing the boat is relatively safe from weather and vandals and by the convenience of having a place to tie up upon returning from a trip. For the great majority who do not have waterfront property and a boat house, marinas are an essential part of owning a boat and having access to the water.

The question is: can the region accommodate more marinas, taking into account both economic and environmental considerations?

At the moment there is a severe shortage of space, and there appears no relief in sight. The Capital Regional District estimates that over the next six years there will be a need for between 1,800 and 2,600 new berths, about 25 per cent more than the number available now. Yet even a whisper of marina development or expansion anywhere on the Saanich Peninsula raises the ire of town councils and community groups.

Boat owners seem by nature less inclined than other sportsmen to join associations and clubs to further their recreation pursuits. Their reluctance to express their point of view may limit their numbers in future.

He did the right thing

A member of the B.C. Pesticide Control Appeal Board did the right thing yesterday when he withdrew from the case he was hearing after suggestions that he might have a conflict of interest.

The hearing will determine whether the provincial fish and wildlife branch should be allowed to use Compound 1080 (sodium monofluoroacetate) to poison wolves and coyotes throughout 60 wildlife districts — about half B.C. — as part of a predator control program. Concerns had been expressed about the position of board member Dale Alsager, owner-operator of the Gang Ranch, because he is an active member of an organization promoting the poisoning of wolves.

Conflict of interest may not be the precisely correct term, but it would have been inappropriate for Alsager to be sitting on this particular appeal.

The point is that the Pesticide Control Appeal Board has almost a judicial role. It is expected that the board members will listen carefully to the evidence presented by both sides, then make as fair and impartial a decision as possible.

The issue is not whether Alsager would have done that, but whether the public would have been convinced of his impartiality. His membership in the pro-poisoning organization (the B.C. Cattlemen's Association) and his previous tacit acceptance of the organization's stand, could lead some persons to think his judgment might be biased.

That would have reduced the credibility, not just of the Pesticide Appeal Board, but of all such administrative appeal bodies. In them, just as in the courts, justice must be seen to be done.

Alsager, doubtless a sound board member, enhanced his own reputation and that of his board by deciding to withdraw from this particular case.

Woof, woof

Saanich's notorious Ten Minute Barking By-law is again raising howls of protest. This time it appears the major problem is that its application is restricted to dogs.

Saanich council this week received a petition signed by 63 people demanding the law which allows dogs no more than 10 minutes of continuous barking be dropped from the books.

The bone of contention, according to a lawyer hired by a dog owner, is that people are using the bylaw to harass the masters of the pets next door. He said that since the bylaw was proclaimed his client has felt abused by a neighbor who complains about his dog to the officials charged with enforcing the Ten Minute Barking By-law.

The municipality's solicitor argued that the bylaw has the flexibility to deal with these situations. He said the allegations had been investigated and that no charges had been laid. He also noted that after a certain number of complaints, bylaw enforcers treat the caller as a chronic complainer.

If the municipal solicitor has read the situation accurately, perhaps habitual complainers should be muzzled after 10 minutes of complaint time.

CLAUDE ADAMS

Kennedy campaign gasps

CHICAGO — Edward Kennedy's presidential hopes were all but crushed yesterday by voters in Illinois, a state that was instrumental in putting his brother John into the White House 20 years ago.

For the seventh time in eight primary battles so far this year, President Carter, the most successful non-campaigner in American history, beat Kennedy by a convincing margin — in this case by 65 to 30 per cent of the vote.

The result cast a pall of gloom over Kennedy supporters at their headquarters in the Bismarck hotel, an apt locale for a floundering campaign. In New York, Kennedy gamely announced he would press on, and that the Illinois result should not be interpreted as a public vote of confidence in Carter's domestic and foreign policies.

Last chance

Kennedy is staking his survival as a presidential candidate in New York, site of the next important primary next week.

The other big winner was Republican Ronald Reagan, who confounded the pollstars by rolling up a 49 to 37 per cent victory over native son Congressman John Anderson. Anderson, an eloquent, white-haired liberal who was hoping for a coup here to give his campaign further momentum, insisted later that Reagan's support nationally did not have the broad base necessary to defeat Carter in November.

Blurred in the numbers was the candidacy of George Bush, the former United Nations ambassador whose fortunes have been in decline since his impressive victory two months ago in Iowa.

Bush, fast becoming the forgotten candidate, could manage only 11 per cent of the vote yesterday.

Illinois, the third most populous state in the union, was to have been the start of the Kennedy renaissance after a series of bad defeats. After all, he had the support of the Chicago mayor's office.

This time, however, the mayor was Jane Byrne, a controversial figure whose hold over the Democratic machine is tenuous at best. Many political observers here argue that Byrne, whose erratic management of Chicago is widely criticized, actually helped drag Kennedy down.

President Carter carried every segment of the state, and even won the black vote by a landslide margin. Not even his embargo of grain sales to the Soviet Union, a hot issue in this mid-western state, eroded his support.

Especially cheering for the White House was this strong vote of confidence from an industrial state only a few days after Carter announced his sweeping anti-inflation program.

EDWARD KENNEDY
. . .integrity problem

As the Carter campaign heads into New York, presidential aides are already claiming a lock on roughly a quarter of the delegates needed for a first-ballot victory at the Democratic national convention this summer.

Randon interviews on the streets here suggest that Kennedy continues to suffer from an integrity problem. Chicagoans repeatedly hearken to Chappaquiddick and Kennedy's moral character, rather than what the candidates see as the pressing issues of the day — inflation and American foreign policy.

"How can you trust the guy?" said one cabbie, an Irish-American.

"He just doesn't have the smarts, like his brothers did," said a woman outside a downtown precinct voting place.

John Anderson, the self-styled pioneer of a "new coalition" in American politics, continued to show his strength among independent voters yesterday.

But his anticipated bonanza of "crossover" votes — ballots cast for him by disenchanted Democrats voting across party lines under Illinois' complex electoral law — never really materialized. Anderson had been counting on these votes for an upset over Reagan.

In a late evening interview, Anderson said: "These results demonstrate once again that Reagan cannot build a coalition beyond that 24 per cent of the electorate in this country this is solidly Republican."

Anderson, who entered this race as a fringe candidate last year, has been sharply criticized by Republicans in recent weeks for an alleged lack of loyalty.

This being Chicago, notorious for its tradition of rough-and-tumble old-style politics, yesterday's primary had its share of oddities and irregularities.

Tampering charges

Several precinct voting stations reported problems with machinery, and charges were hurled of tampering and electronic ballot-box stuffing.

And one Republican candidate for senator, William Scott, had a dual problem: While he watched the votes come in, he was also worrying about a federal court jury that was deliberating his guilt or innocence on five tax fraud counts. By midnight, the jury had been sequestered for more than 40 hours. Also by midnight, Scott had been defeated in his political trial.

Finally, one of the most popular candidates on the ballots yesterday was State Senator Richard Daley, son of the late and great mayor. Daley was running for an important post in Cook County — Chicago and environs — against a candidate hand-picked by Mayor Byrne, who fears the start of another political dynasty.

Daley won handily.

Look at others

One of your correspondents (letter, Separation Costs, Times, March 14) points out, apparently quite forcefully, that before any wild talks of separatism, British Columbians would be wiser to give detailed consideration to the economics related to the creation of an independent state.

I hasten to declare that I am not a separatist, and I would consider the sovereignty of B.C. only as a last, desperate resort should Ottawa totally ignore the legitimate social, cultural, historical aspirations of Canada's 'last frontier' with unique and cherished charactericties deep in the hearts and the will of the people.

Perhaps we should inquire and learn something about the conditions of several very small countries which have achieved and maintained independence, in spite of the fact that they are surrounded by powerful neighbors with which they have been able to have friendly and peaceful relations throughout the centuries.

A few examples come easily before us: the tiny Republic of San Marino in Central Italy, with a consular democratic government modeled on ancient Rome, the small Principalities of Monaco along the French Riviera and the much smaller Liechenstein bounded by Austria and Switzerland.

According to the economic logic of dollars and cents, it seems that these tiny countries would be "better off" as provinces of Italy, France and Austria or Switzerland. Yet, in all these instances the logic of dollars and cents does not apply, and the standard of living of these free inhabitants is not lower than that of their big neighbors which are making no attempts to "absorb" them.

Incidentally, in Liechtenstein the Swiss currency is in use, and San Marino coins are minted in Italy.

Perhaps, after examining the modus vivendi of other human beings in other parts of the world, we may reach the conclusion that a united Canada is the very best for us, and stop complaining about being ignored, disregarded, misunderstood and ripped-off by the "feds". — E. I. Lattes, 432- 200 Dallas Road.

No blue jeans

My wife and I and another couple recently returned from an enjoyable week in Calgary watching the Labatt's Brier. There was no doubt the Canadian Curling Association and all concerned put on a fine show. However, the closing ceremonies turned out to be a horrible experience for British Columbians as well as Albertans.

When the teams were piped onto the ice for the colorful closing ceremonies, in came the entire Alberta team and half the B.C. team in blue jeans. As well the B.C. skip was wearing the Alberta skip's sweater walking with the Alberta team as was the Alberta skip wearing the B.C. skip's sweater and walking with the B.C. team. How childish and what an embarrassment to the organizers!

Congratulations to the other two B.C. reps, Lowell Goulden and Dave Smith, for their excellent dress in the closing ceremonies. — Doug Milne, 1179 Lugrin Place.

1942 Nfld. fire

I am a Canadian writer and historian. About a year ago I began intensive research into the Knights of Columbus Hostel fire here in St. John's on the night of Dec. 12, 1942, when 99 persons lost their lives. I have interviewed a number of survivors living in St. John's for a non-fiction book I am writing about the tragedy. Through the medium of your newspaper I am hoping to reach any survivors living in your part of the country.

If any reader was in the K. of C. Hostel in St. John's on that fateful night in wartime I would appreciate hearing from him or her. I am also interested in contacting anyone who might have photographs either before or after the fire. The book I plan is a serious work and not one of sensational exploitation. — Paul O'Neill, 52 Long Pond Road, St. John's, Newfoundland.

Save Capitol

The letter from Mr. Thomas Palfrey regarding the Capitol Theatre demolition and the apparent lack of interest in this fine example of a movie theatre of the 1920s shows an apathy that seems to exist all too freely.

The Orpheum Theatre in Vancouver was saved from the wrecking ball some years back and has been successful as a fine auditorium devoted largely to the arts, dating from 1927. The Capitol made its name as a fine presentation house replete with pit orchestra under the late Billy Tickle and Al Prescott, with Paul Michelin at the theatre pipe organ, and stage shows in addition to the feature film.

This was in the days when show business was indeed show business. Time was, when a local radio station used live music and a much varied format. That was when radio was radio. Time was when popular music was listenable, the lyrics made sense and the musicians made music.

I feel that all these observations tie in with the 'don't give a damn attitude in this year of progress? 1980 Make a fast buck is the motto today — Reginald Stone, 2510 Cadboro Bay Road.

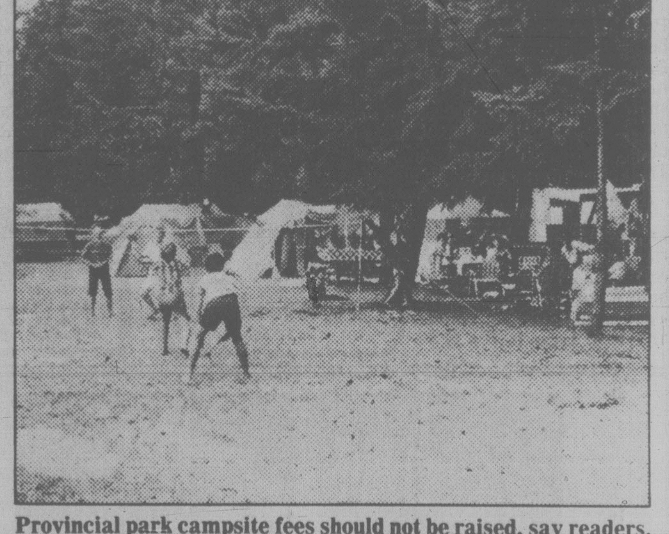
Fair to all

Recently on the radio it was announced that the rentalsman wants all tenants who feel their rents are too high or increased unjustly to phone him free of charge and state their complaint.

In order to be fair, why not have the people who are content with their landlords and rent phone in too.

Enough of this one-sided way of adjusting and making laws for the minority. Let's hear form all the tenants in B.C. before fingers a pointed accusingly.

Why not have the landlords phone in and say how many have good or bad tenants and what their expenses and obligations are in operating rentals. Is not democracy based on fairness? — K. Williams, 1173 King Road.



Provincial park campsite fees should not be raised, say readers.

Utah example

With respect to the recent controversy regarding campsite fee increases from $2 to $3 and from $4 to $5, I would like to bring a certain comparison to readers of the Times.

Wasatch Mountain State Park in the state of Utah has 250 or more campsites. In 1978 it offered electrical, water, and sewer hook-ups for $3 per unit. It also offered private showers, as private as your own bathroom at home i.e. fully enclosed, not a series of stalls as is common in most campsites. Additionally each campsite table has an electrical outlet underneath its edge with the power source coming through its structure from underground wiring.

That park covers 22,000 acres and is 50 miles from Salt Lake City. It also includes a 27-hole golf course (which can be utilized for a modest fee).

They have a policy there that no state park campsite (with the above mentioned facilities) be established within two miles of an existing private campsite. If one does exist (such as at Provo, Utah) no hook-ups are available nor is there a disposal station. Facilities provided consist of showers and flush lavatories, which is fair to private campsites nearby.

Here we are going to be paying $5 for no hook-ups, pit toilets and to that you can also add (if you wish) the expense of a gas mask. — T. M. Reynolds, 4355 Ridgewood Crescent.

Free campsites

The raising of provincial campsite fees makes me very unhappy. I am a landed immigrant form the U.S. I have been living in Canada almost two years.

One of the first things I noticed upon arriving in Canada and one of the Canadian aspects of life that I have enjoyed is the provincial campsites, paid for by taxes and free to the public. I think that no-cost campsites are essential. There are many people who would not possibly be able to enjoy the outdoors without them. For someone like myself who prefers to spend a great deal of time out of doors, commercial campsites used repeatedly can be expensive.

I think that free access to the Canadian outdoors is a right. I can remember times from my childhood that I would not have wanted to miss, but that would not have occurred had there been a restriction of cost. And for some people today the same is true. I would feel very sorry indeed if a child was not allowed the experience of nature.

In California there are no campsites without cost and I think it is a terrible shame. When I came to Canada I was overjoyed, and now I see that possibly what brought me joy will be no more. — Miyo Stevens, 5-133 Cook Street.

TV hucksters of religion

THE LOS ANGELES TIMES

Television and radio preaching, a national growth industry, is one of the most successful and controversial enterprises in American religion.

To the consternation of some established religions, the ministerial superstars who use the air waves to preach their messages and raise funds now claim a weekly audience of more than 129 million — far more than the amount who attend church.

They are using an estimated $600 million worth of TV time this year alone for what is, overall, a billion-dollar business.

Media statistics show that 1,400 radio stations, 36 TV stations and 66 cable systems in the United States specialize in religious broadcasts, with religious radio stations starting up at the rate of about one a week and TV stations about one a month.

Four religious networks feed programs via satellite to stations worldwide and to thousands of cable-TV hookups.

Large communications satellites have revolutionized the video industry because they make possible instant audio and visual transmission to almost anywhere in the world. Satellite transmission has lowered the costs of program duplication and distribution, and has provided a way for religious programs to reach cable as well as broadcast stations.

The traditional organizations have depended largely upon public-service free time in television's low-audience "Sunday morning ghetto" to broadcast their shows. But local stations are seizing the opportunity to sell time at escalating rates to competing independent evangelists. And they are increasingly reluctant to give away time to the mainstream churches.

There is growing friction between this new, highly visible and slickly packaged outlet of religion, and the more staid established mainstream groups, including the National Council of Churches, the U.S. Catholic Conference and several Jewish groups.

The establishment groups are clearly disturbed. Several hundred top mainstream Protestant and Catholic communicators met in New York City recently for a symposium on the electronic church and its perceived threat to liberal and moderate Christianity.

There was envy over the lavish sets and costly, sophisticated camera equipment used by many electronic gospel stars: "I get jealous because I'm used to working with one potted palm and three folding chairs," said one denominational TV producer.

There was criticism of the alleged hucksterism and simplistic theology of some of the big-time broadcasters — what one critic called "a video-induced adrenalin for the religious nervous system."

There were worries that religion-by-the-tube was siphoning off money and members from local parishes and substituting a kind of antiseptic, private experience in place of authentic community.

And there were fears that the electronic church was co-opting right-wing political activism in the name of conservative, Bible-thumping theology.

One psychologist speaking at the two-day symposium called the conflict raging between conventional churches and the highly competitive electronic ministries a holy war with "nothing less than the definition of Christianity at stake."

Even President Carter, who addressed an audience of 4,100 National Religious Broadcasters one night, took special note of the electronic church's clout, and used the opportunity to build election-year goodwill among fellow evangelicals.

"A television station or the Oval Office is a powerful podium," the president said. "Our influence as individuals can be greatly magnified . . . Even more than those in commercial broadcasting, you must take the time, pay the price, to give . . . the true message."

But mainstream critics fear that the true message is being distorted by the money, methods, theology and politics of gaudy electronic religionists.

Electronic preaching has developed its own galaxy of stars. Their names are well known to millions of viewers and listeners, but their incomes are not.

"Few people realize that these celebrity preachers will take to their banks about a quarter of a billion dollars in one year," noted Charles E. Swann, general manager of WRFK-FM, a station based at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va. "They are as polished and sophisticated as the studios and multimillion-dollar religious corporations they head."

Mainstream clergy who are critical of the electronic church not only are upset over its apparent preoccupation with fund-raising, but they also fault many electronic preachers for doling out what the mainstreamers consider shallow theology and simplistic answers to complex questions.

Says Lutheran historian Martin Marty: "These entrepreneurs are comparable to one-issue politicians. They are healers or positive thinkers or what have you . . . They produce clienteles instead of congregations."

Swann compared TV preachers to TV commercials, saying that both "deal largely in magic solutions. Apparently, many Americans still want to believe in magic but even more passionately in magicians."

Robert M. Liebert, a psychologist at the State University of New York, said electronic preachers had "adjusted with lightning speed to the taste of the viewing masses."

That is why, he said, there is an absence of "old-fashioned hellfire and brimstone in the electronic church service. Experience has taught that well-dressed, soft-spoken gracious evangelists, who invariably remind their critics of Johnny Carson, are far more effective than their Gantryish forebears."

Marty has criticized the electronic church on grounds that many people believe that if they support it, they will become materially enriched.

The ultimate effect of the electronic church, he says, is to "turn people loose on a world of things, offering ever more things. They motivate salespeople to sell more, the greedy to get more, the followers to consume more and possess more of the world. They parade the successful."

Security with the mail

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

While there is a general readiness in Canada to concede that it is better for old people to look after themselves at home than to surrender to some form of institutional care, there is no matching readiness to do everything possible to make the arrangement work. If the aged are to enjoy the independence of living at home, the least that society can give them is a sense of security — a feeling of confidence that there is a friendly back-up at hand.

This is a shared obligation, involving families, neighbors, meals-on-wheels organizations and a number of other social services, but today we should like to salute a relatively undeveloped but promising form of support — the Postal Security Alert program started last fall by the Letter Carriers Union of Canada. It has the special appeal of a plan that achieves two objectives in one operation: the delivery of letters and the application of a watchful eye to old people living alone.

St. Catharines has just become the third community (after Windsor and Calgary) to initiate the service, for which there is no charge. The letter carrier, familiar with the habits of those who live along his route, watches out for such signs as drapes that remain undrawn, or letters left uncollected in the mailbox, and sends an alert to his supervisor.

Former Conservative health minister David Crombie did not have much opportunity for prophetic pronouncements during his brief tenure of office, but he did venture the opnion that the social revolution of the 1980s would come on issues affecting old people. He could be right, though there is more evidence indicating the need for change than the certainty that it will occur. Rising life expectancy and falling birth rates plainly indicate that the mathematical dimensions of the problem will be formidable and that the proportion of old people in the population will be dramatically higher than it is today.

The letter carriers have taken imaginative and considerate measures to make life a little better for the senior citizen. Can we all claim as much?

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

After several months of relative obscurity, the Ring-necked Pheasants are beginning to make their presence known again.

It never seems to fail that after a winter of not seeing a pheasant, the "first" one of spring surprises me and at the same time reminds me that they're still here. Not that pheasants "go anywhere" in winter; it's just that they keep a low profile at that time of year.

Evidence that their profile is getting a little higher these days — and will get a lot higher in the next few weeks — can be found in the more frequent sightings of the big, spectacular cocks. In less than an hour's walk in Central Saanich recently, I had my heart's normal rhythm upset considerably by three of them bursting from cover almost at my feet. And everytime — after I'd pulled myself together — I wondered how such a big, seemingly conspicuous bird could remain so inconspicuous.

These more frequent sightings are also evidence that the annual cycle of finding a mate — or mates, since cock pheasants don't always conform to our high moral standards — has begun. They are a sign that the big fellows are on the move seeking a good spot to establish a territory to which they can attract a mate.

We won't see much of the intricate courting process. It is something that isn't often observed, but if you're familiar with the performances of peacocks in zoos, you'll have some idea of how a cock pheasant wins his hen. While not nearly as flamboyant as the peacock's show, the cock pheasant puts on a pretty fair show just the same.

Like the peacock, the cock pheasant's display involves a lot of strutting around the hen. Also, like the peacock hen, the hen pheasant seems singularly unimpressed by the show. Like the peacock, the cock pheasant ruffles and spreads the more showy of his feathers and other adornments as part of his display.

Somehow — by a process of chemistry that is still a mystery, even in humans, the hen makes her choice. And from then until the young are hatched, we really know the pheasants are around.

The reason for this is the well-known "crow" of the cock pheasant. It is his idea of a "song", his way of saying to all other pheasants that his is occupied territory and for all trespassers to beware.

For most of us, the simple raucous squawk is all we know of the pheasant's crow, but there's much more to his "song" than that. For example, on a quiet evening, those near enough, and with a good ear for such sounds, might also hear the low, rough "burrrr" that follows the squawk. This is a sound made by rapidly beating the wings, something like a Ruffed Grouse.

Also part of his "song" are two or three claps of the wings that precede the squawk — but this part is seldom heard, unless you're close to the displaying bird.

Once the eggs have been laid, the hen becomes very inconspicuous, a situation which has led one caller to the conclusion that the cock pheasant crowing in her backyard has lost his mate and is looking for a new one. Not so; he's just holding the fort, so to speak, and she's unobtrusively tending her eggs.

The hen usually does all the incubating and attending to the early life of the young, but once they're about six or seven weeks old the cock may once again become a conspicuous member of the family.

At this time, the cock is the only member of the group in conspicuous plumage, and if danger threatens he usually draws attention to himself — and away from the family — by flying off.

If the family itself is closely threatened, the hen will usually do one of her "exploding" acts while the young stay still and silent. Once the danger has passed, she will return and quietly call her family together again.

As winter approaches, and the families break up, the pheasants become inconspicuous again, refusing to expose themselves except in the direst circumstances.

But that's a few months away. For now, it's pheasant time again.

Nostalgia marches on

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Two old coots were sitting around remembering.

He had remembered that it was their anniversary and she remembered that he had forgotten her birthday last month. "You remembered our anniversary," she said, accepting flowers, granting a kiss.

"It's been a long time, darling," he said.

"Remember what you forgot?" she asked.

"When?"

"Last month," she said.

"Last month," he sighed. "Last month has been so long ago."

He smiled. Nostalgia surged through his veins and came out as a question: "Wasn't that the month that George Bush was the front runner?"

"Let's not get sentimental about the past," she said. "You know it always clogs your veins with nostalgia and you have to take three martinis to clear them out."

"Remember the first night we met?" he asked. "You'd just been to see The Poseidon Adventure . . .

"And you," she said, "all you wanted to talk about was the moral equivalent of war."

"That's right," he cried, snapping his fingers. "That was the day Jimmy Carter declared the moral equivalent of war on the oil shortage."

"Those were exciting years," she said.

"Do you remember exactly what you were doing when you heard the president had declared the moral equivalent of war?" he asked.

"Doesn't everybody?" she asked. "I was half way through an article in People magazine titled 'What Ever Happened to Wayne Newton?' "

"Wayne Newton," he murmured. "I remember Dad talking about Wayne Newton. He and Mom would put 'Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band' on the stereo and sit around in the sauna telling everybody the Beatles were even better than Wayne Newton."

"What ever became of Moms and Dads that sat around in the sauna?" she asked.

"That kind of Mom and Dad went out with the miniskirt and the Nehru jacket," he explained. "What ever happened to the Beatles?"

"What ever happened to the moral equivalent of war?" she replied.

The thought of all the water that had flowed under the dam sobered them. He mixed two martinis.

"Remember our wedding day?" he asked.

She laughed at the memory. "Will I ever forget? You were so excited about the new poll showing that Ted Kennedy could beat Jimmy Carter two to one that instead of saying, 'I do,' you blurted out, 'Two to one.' "

"It was great being young," he said. "What ever happened to Kennedy?"

"Look," she said, "if we don't stop moping about the old days, we'll end up as dreary as Mom and Dad. They're always sitting around asking, 'What ever happened to 'Dark Shadows'?"

"What's 'Dark Shadows'?" he asked. "One of those old Abby Hoffman flicks?"

"Abby Hoffman made love, not flicks," she said.

"I wonder what ever became of Abby Hoffman," he said.

"What ever happened to making love, not nostalgia?" she said.

He mixed two fresh martinis.

"Americans have always made nostalgia," he said. "As Lincoln said, America is bound together by the mystic cords of memory."

"Don't tell me you remember Lincoln," she said.

"No," he conceded, "but I remember Richard Nixon. I remember one night Dad let me sit up late and watch TV and Richard Nixon came on and everybody shouted, 'Four more years! Four more years! Four more years!' "

"Wasn't Nixon in politics?" she asked. "I seem to remember he was mixed up with Al Jolson somehow."

"I'm just a nostalgist, not an antiquarian," he said. "Remember the time Jimmy Carter went to the top of the mountain?"

"Of course, silly," she said. "By that time we'd already been married for months and months. And he came down from the mountain and sat over there — right there in the TV set — and said his government had been a total failure and he made everybody just want to cry and cry."

"Okay, you're so good at remembering, so go ahead and tell me: You remember when the Americans were kidnapped at the embassy in Tehran?"

"Now you're trying to embarrass me about my age," she said.

"You don't remember," he teased.

"It was way back there," she said. "Months ago. But we were already married when it happened. It was just before the greatest threat to world peace since World War II occurred on account of the Russians invading Afghanistan."

"That's right," he said. "It all comes back to me now." He scratched his chin. "I wonder what ever happened to the greatest threat to world peace since World War II," he said.

He made another martini, the clearer to see the torrential onrush of great events pouring into the junkyard of yestermonth.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost more ground in the final session of its sixth straight week of losses.

In the past five weeks the Dow has fallen 84.04, and this week it has dropped more than 20 points further.

Analysts say the market has been reacting to the crunch of record-highinterest rates and rising expectations of a recession in the monthsahead. In recent days the bank prime lending rate has reached 19 per cent.

U.S. government moves a week ago to restrain consumer credit are seen by Wall Streeters as adding to the likelihood of a business slump.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was mixed at the close of quiet trading.

The Finanial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 429.9, down 3.3.

Banks firmed, industrials eased and golds were mixed.

Canadian stocks were mixed.

company reports

Bonanza

Bonanza Oil and Gas Ltd. of Calgary has announced its net earnings for the first year of operations were $326,000 or 6 cents per common share.

The company has also completed the private placement of 800,000 shares of its common stock at $9.50. Warrants attached to the shares entitle holders to purchase an additional 500,000 common shares at $9.50 on or before Nov. 1, 1981 and at $10.50 per share on or before Nov. 1, 1983.

The company's revenue from oil and gas sales for the year ending Dec. 31, 1979 was $2,697,000 and cash flow from operation was $1,668,000 or 30 cents per share.

Doan

Daon Development Corporation of Vancouver has announced its first quarter earnings per common share were up 9 cents over last year.

Net income of $14,614,000 on a total revenue of $129,268,000 represent earnings of 38 cents per common share compared to earnings of 29 cents per common share for the first quarter of 1979.

Daon president J.W. Poole noted however, that while income for the quarter is up over last year, profit from the company's real estate operations did not reach last year's record first quarter level.

Hudson's Bay

Hudson's Bay Co. reported Tuesday sharply higher earnings for 1979 but a company spokesman said the company faces a difficult year in 1980.

The giant Winnipeg-based retailer, which owns all of Simpsons Ltd. of Toronto and 57 per cent of Zeller's Ltd. of Montreal, said its net income in 1979 rose to $80.3 million or $2.98 a common share from $44.6 million or $2.74 a share in 1978.

The company also had an extraordinary gain of $23.2 million from the partial exchange of six-per-cent debentures for shares of Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd. of Calgary.

While the company hopes conditions will improve by the fourth quarter, the most important for retailers, "the first three quarters of the year should be very difficult indeed," Nobbs said.

Numac

Numac Oil and Gas Ltd. of Edmonton had its most successful exploration year ever in 1979, with 62 of 92 wells drilled successful, including nine new oil wells.

President W. S. McGregor says cash flow for the year ended Dec. 31 was the highest ever — $13,161,418 compared with $12,846,082 in 1978.

But net earnings declined — to $6,199,770 or 70 cents a share in 1979 compared with $6,643,955 or 75 cents a share in the previous year — because of higher interest costs and temporary reductions in natural gas sales.

Gross revenue amounted to $20,005,960 compared with $17,477,777 in 1978.

Gov't revenue hike urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The only realistic way to reduce the federal deficit is to increase revenues, says Treasury Board President Donald Johnston.

Johnston said the deficit could not be eliminated by economizing on government expenditures without tackling ongoing programs.

His comments indicated that instead, the Liberals might be looking at rear-ranging traaditional divisions of revenues between the provincial governments and Ottawa.

"The manoeuverability of the government is very limited because, as you appreciate, about 70 per cent of the government expenditure is statutory ongoing programs," Johnston said.

Asked whether he thought it was true that a deficit could only be overcome by increasing revenues, he replied: "I would judge that to be correct."

Johnston said his position does not contradict Liberal arguments during the campaign that the Conservatives were wrong in their proposal to increase the gasoline excise to generate new revenue. The Conservative mortgage tax rebate scheme would have cost about $3 billion, he said.

"If you look at the entire fiscal framework of Canada and you see provinces moving into surplus and the national government moving consistently in deficits, maybe you have to look not only at what revenues you are going to raise from the tax structure but also what should the entire fiscal framework of the country be.

"How should certain kinds of resource revenues be divided and so on? . . . I think you have to look at the full fiscal framework."

The federal deficit was estimated at about $11 billion for the current fiscal year.

Johnston said, however, that there are no doctrinaire answers to the problem. "We've got areas of arithmetic that are completely remote from ideology."

He said although no new policy on Crown corporations has been finalized by the Liberal government, it is possible that under certain conditions some Crown corporations could be turned over to private industry.

"In my view . . . there are satisfactory means, satisfactorry to the government, satisfactory to the employees and in the public interest, in turning back certain sections to the private sector."

Aussies to get a full glass

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — The New South Wales Consumer Affairs Department has made the most popular recommendation in its history — installation of a "plimsoll line" around the tops of beer glasses to insure a full measure.

A spokesman said the recommendation followed "numerous complaints" from beer drinkers of unfilled glasses or glasses top-heavy with froth.

'Proper' inquiry on Vogel: NDP

Although Attorney-General Allan Williams has cleared deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel of allegations that he interfered in the justice system, the NDP is still pressing for an independent judicial inquiry.

"I am not concerned with Vogel's integrity. I am concerned with the integrity of the justice system," NDP critic Alex Macdonald told the legislature Thursday, a few hours after Vogel returned to his desk after a two-week leave of absence.

"When the attorney-general investigates his own role, his predecessor's role and his officials' role, that is not a proper inquiry."

Macdonald also continued to ask questions about the three cases quoted in the CBC report alleging unwarranted interference by Vogel.

"I don't think any young guy who is up on impaired driving charges can take his case to the highest levels in Victoria and have somebody there urge the case be dropped or an appeal against him be abandoned.

"I'd be astounded if that were the case," Macdonald said.

Or when police found an open bottle, ice cubes and a glass in the car of a well-known Kootenay lawyer, "why did the Crown drop the serious charge of refusing to take the breathylizer test?"

Macdonald asked: "Was there an attempt to prevent former Supreme Court Justice John Farris from being called as ~~a witness~~ in a criminal case involving prostitute Wendy King?"

"If that attempt was made it is a very serious matter. In my opinion that would constitute obstruction of justice," said the former NDP attorney-general.

"In the justice system you must be absolutely careful that no one is privileged and gets special attention for their charge, as compared to the ordinary run of people," he said.

Macdonald also took Williams to task for complaining to the federal minister responsible for the CBC and to the CRTC about the CBC's report.

"The attorney-general should be above that," he said.

He suggested the matter be left to the private libel suit launched by Vogel against the CBC.

Forestry program labelled misleading

The NDP Thursday accused Forests Minister Tom Waterland of reseeding the books to make a promised $1.4-billion forest management program more glamorous than it really is.

The five-year program was outlined in Finance Minister Hugh Curtis' $6.2-billion spending plans earlier this month.

Bill King (NDP — Shuswap-Revelstoke) told a news conference the budget had indicated new funds would go into the program.

In fact, he said, the only new money in the program is the $147 million Forest and Range Resource Fund which the government proposes to set up.

He said $785 million comes from adding up the forest ministry budget during a five-year-period, and including it in a five-year expenditure plan.

"Much of the budget goes to the minister's office for administration of the varied functions of the ministry and has nothing to do whatsoever with intensive forest management," King said.

He said the remaining $448 million appears to be a transfer of the cost of intensive forest management conducted by the private sector, "some of whom are doing a very, very good job."

Until now this cost was part of the calculations in deciding how much the government should charge for timber.

"Rather than showing that as a cost to the licence-holders, they will now transfer that as a cost to the government and show it as an expenditure," he said.

Commenting on the government's massive forests resource analysis, he said no provision had been made to assure a supply of timber for small operators and they are "going down like tenpins in all regions for lack of supply."

He expressed concern that the government would lose money because it does not have enough staff to monitor the costs charged by the companies for intensive forest management, how much timber is cut and the costs involved.

The NDP forest critic said the government's resource base shows there will be a timber shortage in the next 10 to 15 years.

"This is a matter of grave concern," he said, because it will lead to an interruption in the industry on which is based B.C.'s economic strength.

King said the government should reduce the allowable cut as much as possible without hurting the industry and causing layoffs, and put emphasis on the development of better techniques to use the existing resources.

Victoria agents object

The Victoria Insurance Agents' Association has added its protest over the way in which the Insurance Corp. of B.C. solicited general insurance business from pensioners.

Association vice-president Stewart McIntosh said a formal protest to ICBC may be made because of the Crown corporation's use of its auto insurance files to make a mailing list offering an old age pension discount.

"This is not a normal business practice or competition where a government-owned and controlled insurance company uses the government mails to distribute advertising to compete with private industry," McIntosh said.

The information in ICBC files is not available to the public or any other private insurer, he said.

Private agents have been asking senior citizens who call about general insurance whether they are motorists and are finding in each case that they are.

McIntosh also said he wants to make it clear that the private insurers has no involvement with critical statements published in reference to the discount system for seniors.

"In fact, they support any contribution to senior citizens and those on fixed incomes," McIntosh said.

"It should be noted that there are several insurers in B.C. who have been offering such a discount for some time and other insurers whose costing is more competitive with ICBC on a normal basis, including the discount."

Confederation grant made

The provincial secretary's office has made a grant of $51,700 to the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Building in Charlottetown.

The donation represents B.C.'s annual contribution towards the operation of the centre.

Doctors misjudge public: Mair

B.C. doctors made a mistake when they announced last week they want to average $100,000 a year income from Medicare, Health Minister Rafe Mair stated Thursday.

"The doctors seriously misjudged public opinion," he said.

"The B.C. Medical Association obviously overlooked the fact that the money they are asking for is from taxpayers, most of whom struggle day by day to keep up with life's necessities."

Mair said the letters and telephone calls he has received from the public and even from some members of the medical profession indicate society is not willing to pay that kind of money.

The BCMA's publicity campaign is aimed at influencing negotiations between physicians and the Meical Services Commission, Mair said.

The current rate contract between doctors and the commisson doesn't expire for more than a year.

Socreds oppose turkey takeover

The provincial government does not want U.S.-based Cargill Grain to increase its domination of B.C. turkey processing by buying Abbotsford-based Maplewood Poultry, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Thursday.

Cargill now processes 60 per cent of the province's turkey production.

Hewitt said his ministry has written to the Foreign Investment Review Agency in Ottawa to state its objection to the possible sale.

Barbara Wallace (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) had raised the matter in the legislature Wednesday, saying B.C. producers had been pressuring the government for some time to take action.

More than a year ago, the government sold Panco Poultry — purchased by the former NDP administration — to Cargill because it didn't want to be in the chicken business, Hewitt said.

Handicap grant stays

A program helping handicapped persons communicate will continue getting provincial government financial support.

Greater Victoria Society for Alternative Communication for Handicapped Individuals has proven its value since 1976 and will get a $2,190 monthly operating grant, says Finance Minister Hugh Curtis.

Known as Blissymbolics, the program makes use of symbols for people who cannot speak due to cerebral palsy, strokes, or brain damage.

Remorse tweaks burglar belatedly

A thief named Andrew who broke into a house in James Bay last year has apparently had a twinge of conscience.

On Wednesday he left a note apologizing for the break-in at the home at 27 South Turner.

The letter addressed to homeowners Mr. and Mrs. Ken Lines said:

"I'm extremely sorry I burgled your home.

"I'm now on remand and hope to do better in the future.

"Yours sincerely,

"Andrew L."

Mrs. Lines said that while can applaud the thief's remorse she'd still like to get back the things he took in the break-in last April.

Among the items stolen where her great-great-great-grandfather's gold watch.

Tenacity gets its man

A persistent city policeman was praised today for helping nab a suspect in a five-month-old hit-and-run accident that seriously injured a woman pedestrian.

The suspect will appear in court April 1 charged with hit and run, impaired driving and driving while his licence was suspended.

Insp. Ron Bentley said today Constable Wayne Coleman conducted a tenacious investigation leading to the arrest of a 51-year-old Up-Island man Thursday.

The charges stem from an incident last Oct. 22 when a 55-year-old woman was knocked down by a car at Fort and Pandora.

Rita Baker, 1720 Amphion, received a broken arm and tail bone, and extensive bruising. She is still receiving therapy.

Bentley said the driver of the car and a passenger got out and looked at the woman lying on the road and then drove off.

A passerby recorded the licence number.

Officers traced the licence to an up-Island residence but the person had moved without giving a forwarding address.

Bentley said Coleman kept working and finally managed to track down the passenger in the car and other witnesses.

Meanwhile, the information on the suspected driver was put in the police computer bank.

Bentley said officers picked up a man Wednesday for being drunk and when they checked his name through the computer they were advised he was wanted in connection with the hit and run.

Woman tries bank job

A 53-year-old Victoria woman has been charged with the attempted robbery of a Duncan bank Thursday.

Mary Rita Hall, of no fixed address, was to appear in provincial court in Duncan today.

RCMP said a woman entered the Bank of Montreal on Station Road shortly before noon and handed a teller a note.

The teller sounded a silent alarm and two plainclothes RCMP officers who happened to be in the bank at the time strolled over and arrested the suspect.

Police said no weapon was involved and details of the note have not been made public.

It was the second attempted robbery at the bank this month.

On March 7, two juvenile boys handed a loan clerk a note demanding money.

The boys were scared off and about 20 minutes later police arrested the suspects, aged 15 and 11, in a pool hall about half a block from the scene.

Duo nabbed

City police have charged two youths with a purse-snatching in James Bay Thursday afternoon, the fourth such incident this week.

The suspects, aged 17 and 19, were picked up at a house on Cedar Hill Road about 5:30 p.m., three hours after a 78-year-old woman who was walking in the 400-block Government had her purse grabbed.

Police said a citizen who saw the thief run through a yard and jump into a car gave police a description.

The purse containing about $30 is missing.

The accused have been issued notices to appear in court April 1.

Deadline extended for Games travellers

British Columbians who have contracted with Sears Travel Ltd. to attend the summer Olympics in Moscow have been given a final-payment deadline extension from Saturday to March 31.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen says he has been told by the company's Toronto office the $400 cancellation charge is still in effect. But if Canada boycotts the games, or the Canadian team doesn't take part, customers would have the option to travel to the games or cancel with a full refund less $100 per person charge.

The minister said new cancellation arrangements are now in effect in addition to the deadline extension.

From April 1 to May 31 the cancellation charge is 60 per cent of the published cost of the tour. From June 1 to departure the cancellation charge is 75 per cent of the published cost of the tour.

Prior to these changes, Nielsen said customers cancelling after the deadline would have been charged the full cost of the tour.

Tour package prices vary between $1,775 and $2,736. Customers were required to place an initial deposit of $750 per person to confirm their reservation.

Nielsen said he had received numerous letters from people who were upset by the cancellation arrangements but said the terms were not in violation of any law.

"While I am not satisfied with the settlement, I am pleased that the tour operators have responded to my request that some concessions be made to customers in this difficult position," Nielsen said.

He will instruct ministry officials to review provincial travel legislation to determine if amendments dealing with cancellation procedures would be beneficial.

Hit-run driver hunted

Colwood RCMP are searching for the driver of a car involved in a two-car head-on collision on Sooke Road Thursday night that injured a Sooke couple.

Mr. and Mrs. John Goldie of 2330 French are in fairly good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with undetermined injuries.

Police said the driver fled on foot after the accident that occurred at 9:40 p.m. in the 4300-block Sooke.

Before the judge

Three days have been set aside in provincial court for the preliminary hearing into a charge of first-degree murder against Barry Dennis McFadden, 29, of 10327 Bowerbank in Sidney.

McFadden appeared Thursday before Judge Lorne Pearce in connection with the stabbing death Monday of 31-year-old Barbara Marian MacKay of 5420 Old Saanich.

The preliminary hearing was set for April 29 and 30, and May 1 after Crown counsel Don Laughton informed the court that two to two and a half days were required.

The 30th person arrested during a drug raid last Thursday made his first appearance in court.

Paul Foster Nelson, 42, of 216 Moss, was charged with two counts of trafficking in hashish.

He was ordered released on his own recognizance in the sum of $500 and defence lawyer Robert Price elected trial by judge without jury and waived Nelson's right to a preliminary hearing.

A 31st person is expected to appear today.

Sentences totalling two years were imposed on 30-year-old Ronald George McWilliams who pleaded guilty to three break-ins — two committed while on bail for the first — and possession of a key for breaking into a coin-operated machine.

McWilliams admitted breaking into Individual Dry Cleaners, 2590 Quadra, on Saturday, and Helm's Inn, 668 Superior, and Richardson Manor Rest Home, 1032 Richardson, Wednesday morning.

Court was told the first break-in occurred about 6 p.m. at the dry cleaners. Police found the front glass broken and a large amount of blood by the counter. McWilliams, who was bleeding from a head cut which required 11 stitches, was arrested at the scene and told police an elderly man who was walking by pushed him into the glass.

After being granted bail Monday, McWilliams was caught in the act about 2:15 a.m. Wednesday by the manager of the Helm's Inn, who heard a noise in the office. She saw McWilliams taking about $115 from a cash box before running away.

About an hour later, Laughton said, Victoria police were called about a man hanging in a window at the rest home. They found McWilliams stuck in the window.

Officers also found a key, which fit a shuffleboard at the Bastion Inn.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said McWilliams had personal problems over the last two weeks stemming from his wife asking him to leave because of his inability to find work. MacKenzie said McWilliams had gone to the Bastion Inn beer parlor Tuesday night and had a combination of beer and valium pills.

MacKenzie said the offences showed a lack of professionalism and competence.

Pearce said the protection of the public must be the dominant factor in sentencing and said the committing of two more break-ins while on bail showed a complete disregard for the law and court.

He handed out consecutive one-year sentences on the dry cleaning establishment and hotel break-ins, gave a six-month, concurrent term for the rest home break-in, and a three-month, concurrent term for possessing the key.

Ned Wilson Matilpi, 22, of Alert Bay, received a 10-month sentence after pleaded guilty to taking a vessel without the owner's consent, two counts of impaired boating, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, and refusing a breath test demand.

Laughton said the series of events began Sept. 7 when Matilpi took a vessel which was at the Inland Kenworth docks at Port McNeill for repairs. The key had been left in the ignition.

Matilpi took the boat for a number of hours and returned to the wharf, running into the breakwater and three vessels before stopping. Damage to the stolen vessel, the Santa Rosa, was estimated at $7,000 and to one of the other three vessels at $3,500.

RCMP found four intoxicated persons on board the Santa Rosa.

Matilpi is serving a six-month term imposed Feb. 11 in Victoria.

Laughton asked that further time be imposed so that an earlier recommendation by Judge Blake Allan that Matilpi serve his sentence at the Alouette River unit for treatment of alcoholism could be implemented.

Pearce imposed the 10-month sentence for taking the boat without permission and added two concurrent sentences of 21 days each and two more concurrent sentences of 14 days each.

Pearce also said he would strongly recommend Matilpi be placed at Alouette River and placed him on 18 months probation.

Fined $450 each for drinking-driving offences were: Randolph Charlie, 20, of Harrison Lake; Robert Roy Collins, 20, of Millet, Alberta; Douglas Leonard Bussard, 28, of 1820 Stelly's Crossroad; and Robert James Stevens, 27, of 10043 Wisteria Place.

CLUES ACROSS:

4. TRACK not truck. Driving a TRACK — actually creating a route — is "bound to have difficulties." Driving a truck through virgin jungle is probably impossible (or, if there is a road through, it's easy).
7. CORONET not coroner. Because a CORONET is a small crown worn by princes and others of the nobility, it certainly suggests high rank. A coroner is an elected or appointed comminity office holder.
8. SOUND not found. There is no problem in finding tires, they're on sale everywhere. Naturally, the first requirement is that a replacement be SOUND.
9. DRUNKS not drinks. Partaking of drinks is voluntary and is usually moderate. Where there are DRUNKS they can be disturbing.
11. STEW not step. The clue suggests something which, had it been a success, would be repeated. However, a step taken may be intended as a once-and-for-all measure in the first place.
12. PROD not prop. An "incentive" stimulates rather than supports.
14. FATS not oats. The very open and general nature of the clue favors FATS, or a subdivision of diet, rather than a particular food item (oats).
16. CARD not hard. As an ordinary viewer, one may scarcely know which are the hard tricks; but one is consciously watching CARD tricks.
18. FLOW not plow. "FLOW" is better suited to the theme of passing easily across. "Plow" is the sort of word used more in relation to forcing a way through something.
23. SEASON not reason. Though there is no evident reason for one's becoming rheumatic, the pains occur all the year round, SEASON is a good answer.
24. EROTIC not exotic. Whether or not dancing is EROTIC is commonly a matter of interpretation or response on the part of the audience (i.e., what men "find" it to be). Its being exotic, or foreign, is more a matter of fact.

CLUES DOWN

2. DOING not going. If a clock needs regulating, say, it is obviously not DOING really well at its job of telling the time. However, it may well be going or running perfectly well in a strictly mechanical sense.
3. PETS not pens. The clue implies that "these" are more or less favored (so that one may be your special favorite). However, your attitude to pens may well be quite casual.
6. CONCERT not conceit. To give pleasure is the purpose of CONCERTs. Conceit, an exaggerated opinion of oneself, usually is irritating to the conceited one's companion.
10. POOR not boor. POOR is more to the point, since the prime requirement of a sugar daddy is money rather than personal charm.
15. SEWING not sawing or sowing. The clue tends to view a "job of this" as a sort of visual concept, or something one can show as an outcome. SEWING is very apt in this way, but sawing and sowing, are not.
19. LIST not lisp. Nautically, a LIST is a bad thing (though if fairly slight, even though "distinct," it might be considered not all that bad"). Such a lisp isn't really bad.

Kissing okay

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — India's Information and Broadcasting Ministry has ruled that kissing scenes may be allowed in Indian movies for the first time, press reports said.

Vasant Sathe, the film censor, said he was against a move to ease the ban against showing Indian women in cabarets or in nude scenes. But a show of human affection through a natural kiss may be permitted, he added.

"I heard somebody say 'Heeeeeeere's Johnny!'"

Contract Bridge : B. Jay Becker

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has gone:

South	West	North	East
1♠	2♣	Dble	Pass

What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠KQJ1087 ♡942 ♢A63 ♣5
2. ♠KJ962 ♡QJ753 ♢A ♣K7
3. ♠KQ874 ♡863 ♢AQJ95 ♣—
4. ♠AQJ1083 ♡AK4 ♢K72 ♣8
5. ♠AKJ52 ♡KJ84 ♢KQ83 ♣—

1. Two spades. Perhaps you wouldn't have opened with only 10 high-card points — though you should with six playing tricks — but once you do you should reject partner's penalty double. North presumably expects you to have about 14 high-card points and three defensive tricks, and you simply don't have them.

It is therefore advisable to bid two spades and in that way tell North that your opening bid was based on offensive, not defensive, values.

2. Pass. Here it's best to stand for the double — even though you have unexpressed distributional values — because your opening bid is normal from the standpoint of high cards. There is a good chance for a fat penalty, especially when you have the K-x of trumps to fortify your partner's length and strength in clubs.

3. Two diamonds. This case is similar to the first one, in that you're short of the usual high-card values for an opening bid. The run-out in diamonds identifies the distributional nature of your opening bid as well as the limited high-card values. Your void in clubs militates strongly against a pass. The more trumps you have when partner doubles, the more pleased you should be to let the double stand, and the converse follows almost automatically.

4. Three spades. Game seems almost certain and you should invite it by jumping to three spades. The chief reason for rejecting the double is that it's not likely that the penalty you can almost surely collect by passing will compensate for the value of the game (or slam) you can probably make.

In the great majority of cases, it is best to respect your partner's double in the given sequence, but you should also firmly resolve that partner's double is merely a suggestion, not a command.

5. Three clubs. Here there seems to be an excellent chance for a slam — though perhaps there's only a game — and it would be against the odds to accept the double. The void-showing cuebid suggests a slam and strongly urges North to set his sights on a high-level contract in any suit but clubs.

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, March 22, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Go straight to the boss — means ask questions of those at top and skip the 'ribbon clerks.' Refuse to become tangled in bureaucratic red tape. Write, call, submit suggestions, give full play to intellectual curiosity. Gemini person plays key role.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You learn about time-and-motion, basic costs, ways to increase income potential. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. Get off sidelines, let go of 'security blanket,' and take cold plunge into future. You're going to make money!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get going, take initiative, welcome fresh concepts and meetings with exciting people. Moon cycle high; you can be at right place at crucial moment. Your timing, judgment hit target. You could fall madly in love.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Intuitive intellect 'flourishes.' You sense when something of importance is to occur. Aura of mystery is present. You gain valid glimpse of what occurs behind the scenes. Part of scenario includes special organization, club, hospital.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will be more active socially than in recent past. People comment on your special talents and sense of humor. Routine changes and you must be careful where exercise and diet are concerned. You receive good news in connection with written material.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You've asked for test or challenge and now you have it. Pay special attention to details, fine print. Accent on standing in community, governmental position and edicts. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio individuals are in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be ready for change, travel, variety and telephone call which could alter sense of direction. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Long-range projects command spotlight. Published material is part of intriguing scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Check values, obtain appraisals, add to special collection. One close to you confides 'money situation.' Dig deep for answers, reject superficial indications. Go after story behind the story. Taurus, another Scorpio and a Libran figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Time is on your side—you can afford to play waiting game. Defer to wishes of close associate, partner or mate. Make future plans, gather necessary material. Avoid direct confrontations. Protect self in emotional clinches.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You learn what has to be done and how to accomplish it. Practical issues dominate. Accent on basic services, pets and dependents. Keep resolutions concerning diet, nutrition and recreation. Avoid extremes. Remove safety hazards, especially in the home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You complete project and learn meaning of love. Aries, Leo, Libra persons play key roles. Accent on speculation, variety, young persons and exciting experiment. Where contests are concerned, stick with number 9. Past favor is returned—with interest.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You find original ways to resolve longstanding dilemma. Accent on property, home base, organization and priorities. Complete transaction—take initiative in closing a deal which tended to 'linger.' Gemini, Leo persons figure prominently.

IF MARCH 22nd IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you learned early that you did not fit in with 'family pattern.' Many consider your concepts to be 'revolutionary.' Leo, Aquarius, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. In April, you follow through on hunch and heighten sense of emotional-financial security. Travel and accelerated social activity indicated for you in May. During 1980, you learn to separate factual material from fantasy. There will be some disillusionment, but you survive and become stronger as a result of certain amount of emotional turmoil.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. Hunter

"That's a funny amount, seventy-seven cents and the dollars all sevens too," said Dave, pointing to an invoice on the desk. "It's for those thirteen crushers you ordered."

Harry smiled. "I remember. They're all the same, but no volume discount. It's sure odd about the sevens."

Very odd! What was the unit price?

10's her lucky number

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Bo Derek prepared a cheese and tomato sandwich for husband John and in their cozy Marina del Rey apartment beside the small boat channel to the Pacific the other day.

Bo wore a beige terrycloth jumpsuit and nothing else except a baseball cap, her long blonde hair falling loosely to her shoulders.

Her sister, Kelly Collins (Bo's maiden name), was on the telephone talking to a company from which Bo had ordered a small sailboat with a pink sail and the number "10" — the title of her hit movie — emblazoned on the sail.

John, his mane of silver hair uncombed, relaxed in a sports shirt and corduroy trousers, watched his beautiful, 23-year-old wife as she moved easily between kitchen area and living room which flow together.

There was approbation in John's eyes and amusement around his mouth as Bo, 30 years his junior, readied lunch, setting foot-high tables on the floor.

When Bo settled down, daintily munching her sandwich and an enormous dill pickle, she look anything but the "media event" she has become. Bo was gorgeous, to be sure, unprepossessing without a smidgeon of makeup.

Six months ago Bo was anonymous. Today, thanks to her role in "10," she is the most famous young woman, and probably the most photographed, on the globe. Has instant notoriety make her happy? Is it an aphrodiasic? Is it addictive?

"I enjoy a little bit of it, but basically not," she said. "I can't believe what's going on — how many photographers show up when I go any place. It doesn't make a lot of sense.

"I definitely plan to walk away from it all in four or five years. I've dreamed since childhood of living on a farm with horses, cows and a goat."

TOWN TALK

"If you read a daily newspaper, subscribe to a weekly newsmagazine and/or tune in to a nightly newscast, the enclosed could be the most important letter you'll receive this year," reads the type across the top of the bright red envelope arriving in the Times newsroom.

It's addressed to Mr. B.J. McLintcok, Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoris, B.C., Canada.

First off, it's Victoria and not Victoris and secondly, we don't have a Mr. B.J. McLintcok working here. We do, however, have Barbara McLintock, the editorial page editor. That must be it.

Let's open it anyway.

Hmmm. It seems to be have something to do with newspapers. Yep, that's it because here in the second paragraph it says: "To our way of thinking (and I'm sure to yours), the way you should get the news is accurately . . ."

No argument there, although it would be nice if we could get our mail that way, too. The post office would undoubtedly appreciate it.

So who fired off this misguided missive? Why, none other than that pillar of reportorial accuracy, the Columbia Journalism Review.

Hoo, boy . . .

Breathless blurb department.

That's the place for the B.C. Television news release which says — wait for it — that the Jack Webster show is coming to Victoria March 25-26.

The release — it's got more !!!!!!!!!!sthan a comic strip — announces he'll broadcast live from CHEK-TV and it all bids fair to be a two-day tempest in a teapot!

The show will feature NDP leader Dave Barrett and Webster will also take a look at legislative goings-on.

Gollee!

They might have looked formidable but those two submarines that B.C. bought at the beginning of the First World War and handed over to the Royal Canadian Navy two days later wouldn't have helped much if the Germans decided to take us on.

George Gilbert, now 93, was one of the crew that manned the CC1, which along with the CC2, was B.C.'s navy for two heady days.

He says the CC1 had a crew of nine and her armament consisted of five rifles.

In spite of that, the submarines were credited with scaring away two German cruisers which were warned by a radio operator in Mexico the subs were lurking in Victoria harbor.

Unaware the subs were virtually unarmed, the cruisers bypassed Victoria and headed further south.

Don't let anyone sell the Canadian Petroleum Association short when it comes to the smarts.

The Calgary-based CPA has pulled a real coup in signing up Gerry Bryson, who served the provincial government as deputy finance minister for 23 years, to work for it here in Victoria.

Bryson says he'll be B.C. general manager for the association and will work out of here as a spokesman for the industry in its dealings with the government.

The association represents the major oil companies in Canada in expressing their views to the provincial and federal governments.

And who knows the ins and outs of Victoria better than Bryson?

Greater Victoria school trustee John Young will tackle a complex topic in a speech Tuesday in the senate chambers at the University of Victoria.

Young will discuss his experiences as an educator.

And since the meeting is sponsored by the Alliance Francaise and the UVic French department, he'll do it in French.

After 67 years, it's the SPFI and not the SSFI.

The South Saanich Farmer's Institute has slid into history leaving the Saanich Peninsula Farmer's Institute as its legacy.

The name change, put forward to reflect the widening membership of the organization, was approved unanimously by about 100 members at the group's annual meeting.

Dairy farmer Joe Taylor is president, Art Garcia of the Canada Farm Labor Pool is vice-president, former secretary-treasurer Bill McKechnie got the new post of secretary and dairy farmer Marie Mutrie got the other half of the job as treasurer.

Just for history buffs: South Saanich farmers were organized before the Institute was formed in 1913. The earlier group was the South Saanich Agricultural Society, formed in 1868.

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. is taking its Seat Belt Convincer — a sled-type device which provides a graphic illustration of what happens to someone when their car crashes and they're without a seat belt — is off on a province-wide tour.

The device has been out before so that isn't really the news.

What's news is that the man who's demonstrating it is none other than big Andy Stephen, whose stature and booming voice adorned TV screens and the legislature for years.

The show will play 36 communities across the province to bring home the seat belt message.

ICBC couldn't have picked a better man.

When Andy talks, everybody, but everybody has to listen.

Opera conductor and former Victorian Timothy Vernon has signed a three-year contract as artistic director of the city's Pacific Opera Company.

Vernon will direct both next season's productions — Rossini's Barber of Seville in September and Puccini's Madama Butterfly in the early spring of 1981.

Still based in Toronto where he has conducted main season productions for the Canadian Opera Company, Vernon looks forward to a good deal of flying about the country because he is negotiating contracts in other Canadian and American cities.

While in Victoria for contract talks, Vernon auditioned 50 singers from this area and the mainland and was surprised at the quality of the talent.

"But it will still probably be necessary to bring artists from major centres for such roles as Butterfly and the Barber's Rosina," he says.

There's a happy ending to last week's Mrs. Florence Brown story.

She's the lady who has been waiting three years to get a long-term care bed in the Comox Valley to be near her husband, Percy, who lives with her son-in-law and daughter, Phil and Mary Swanson of Cumberland.

Mrs. Brown broke her hip in June, 1978, and has been in hospital ever since in Victoria. Her husband, because of failing health, had to sell their Victoria home and move to Cumberland.

The Browns' granddaughter Gail Aldridge phoned Town Talk two days after the story ran to say her grandmother now has a bed at Orchard Manor Rest Home in Courtenay. Normally the home has one and two-bed rooms. But a third bed was put in one room to accommodate Mrs. Brown.

The Browns are reunited at last.

Flex those muscles. If you think you got what it takes here's your chance to prove it.

Radio station VI90 is putting on an arm-wrestling contest March 30 at the YM-YWCA, 880 Courtney.

Weigh-in is 11 a.m. and the gruntin' and groanin' starts at noon.

Entry fee is $5 if you're over 18; $2.50 ages 13 to 17. But if you just want to watch the fun the tickets are only $1.50 for adults, $1 for senior citizens and students, and 75 cents for youth.

There will be prizes and trophies for winners of each wrestling category. Spectators, too, stand to get something for just being there — door prizes will be given away although the organizers haven't said what they'll be.

Christine Paisley hangs one of her original drawings in her new apartment

Christine has overcome

By PAUL MINVIELLE

When Christine Paisley was a youngster she was in and out of hospitals so often she thought everybody did it.

Even later, when she attended school at the G.R. Pearkes Clinic, her classmates were all handicapped so she never really thought about being different.

The fact that she had a disease called spina bifida didn't mean that much, even though it meant having about 10 operations to try and correct the spinal defect she had since birth.

Her first operation was two days after she was born in Browns Flats, N.B., just outside of Saint John. Christine's family moved to the coast in 1968.

It was when she suddenly found herself in Stelly's high school in Brentwood Bay that Christine became excrutiatingly aware that she was different.

"I didn't think I was going to make it," Christine said. "It was quite a change and there was a lot more pressure."

Now that she's 21, Christine knows she made it. Not only did she make it, she graduated with honors.

Her concerns have changed now. She's a working girl and is negotiating to buy her first car.

She's already been taking lessons in driving with hand controls.

While she's enjoying her job as secretary at Peninsula Chimney Service in Sidney, Christine knows she's not going to be there the rest of her life.

She's already an accomplished artist and wants to study art, either at an art school or in a fine arts course at a university.

Anyone who meets Christine can't help but recognize her fierce determination to be as independent as she can be.

But she has no hesitation in confirming that if it hadn't been for the Easter Seal buses operated by the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children, she would have found it virtually impossible to attend school.

And Christine knows how much Easter Seal camps such as Camp Shawnigan mean to kids who spend a lot of their time shuffling between home and hospitals.

A vacation at the 20-acre beauty spot are the sort of vacations that give everyone that special glow.

Most of the money for Camp Shawnigan comes from the annual Timmy's Telethon, and this year it will be telecast Saturday on Channel 10 at 8 p.m. until 5 p.m. Sunday.

The pledge number is 381-1980. All it takes is a phone call, followed up later with a cheque or hard cash.

Now where else can you buy a bright future for so many bright kids?

City skier killed

A 24-year-old Victorian and two skiing friends were killed Sunday in the French Alps near Chamonix when caught in an avalanche.

Peter Noel, who had been a physical education student at the University of British Columbia, had taken a year off to travel.

His mother and stepfather, Joyce and Cyril Bedwell of 316-1610 Jubilee, received a letter from him shortly after they learned Monday of his death.

In the letter Peter described the beauty of the Alps and said how much he was enjoying the skiing. He told his parents he was looking forward to coming home to complete his studies and eventually get a job as a ski instructor.

Several other avalanches occurred about the same time in other areas near Chamoinix, claiming at least three other lives.

Consultants slammed over effluent backfire

East Saanich Indian band manager Gus Underwood today blasted the consultants who gave assurances years ago that the outfall from a sewage treatment plant wouldn't pollute the ocean.

Underwood was responding to the federal fisheries department's expansion of an existing shellfish closure to include Saanichton and Saanich Peninsula beaches harvested by his band.

Asked how the closure would affect Indian shellfish harvesting in the area, Underwood said: "It's ironic that something like this should happen as the result of sewage."

He recalled that when Central Saanich council first approached the band about installing a sewage treatment plant on band land, "there was a report from these wise people — what are they called? Oh, yes. Consultants — 'Yep, no problem' they said.

"Here we are 10 years down the road and what's happening? Everything's polluted."

Remembering meetings on the subject, Underwood said: "We were instructed there would be no pollution. If there's anything left, they told us, it will be diluted.

"Their words assured us there would be no contamination of any of our beaches.

"The old outhouses did a better job of filtering than their treatment plants do."

A band member who went to James Island earlier this week to dig clams reported to the band council meeting Thursday night he'd found the fisheries department's closure notice posted on the beach.

The closure was ordered as the result of a three-month bacteriological and sanitary survey on the east side of the Saanich Peninsula from Tsehum Harbor to Telegraph Cove.

The Environmental Protection Service survey revealed many shellfish beaches in the area have been contaminated by pollution, mostly from outfalls.

The original closure area from Swartz Bay to Turgoose Point has been expanded to include Saanichton Bay, Island View Beach and an area from Cordova Bay south to Ten Mile Point.

"It's better to buy government-inspected clams, mussels and oysters in stores around southern Vancouver Island than it is to harvest them yourself," a fisheries spokesman said.

"All affected areas have been posted. The affected shellfish are filter feeders which absorb bacteria and viruses from surrounding waters.

"If consumed, they could cause sewage-related diseases such as gastroeteritis, infectious hepatitis and salmonellosis," he said.

The East Saanich band does considerable harvesting of crabs and shellfish on James Island, Saanichton Bay, and on Pender, Saturna, Salt Spring and Mandarte islands.

Archives, community offices planned for old library

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A proposal to spend $176,000 to renovate the old downtown public library at Yates and Blanshard for a Greater Victoria municipal archives and office space for community organizations will be submitted to the core municipalities this month.

Victoria's intergovernmental affairs committee Thursday approved a new proposal drafted by city manager Jim Bramley for the old city-owned Carnegie building and the newer five-floor library annex behind it.

He estimated it would cost $176,375 for start-up expenditures, almost all of it to upgrade and separate the two buildings, which now are connected on several floors and have a common stairway.

First-year operating costs of the archives would be an additional $107,550 while $26,300 has been projected as the annual costs of the section of the annex to be used by non-profit community organizations.

Bramley also budgeted $25,000 annual rent for the old Carnegie building. This income is to be applied to operating costs of the annex. It has been city policy to rent out the original library and use the proceeds to offset some of the costs of local groups using the annex for office space.

It is a complicated arrangement because while the city owns the Carnegie outright, all four core municipalities share ownership of the annex and they must approve plans for future use after the library moves out in April.

Saanich said last fall it endorsed the general principle of the proposal, but Esquimalt and Oak Bay indicated they did not support the plan, Bramley said.

"Subsequent to these replies, the area mayors met on this matter and have indicated that they would be prepared to take a second look at the proposal," he said in a memo to Mayor Bill Tindall.

Funding for the project would be shared on the inter-municipal formula, meaning Saanich and Victoria each pay roughly 40 per cent and Oak Bay and Esquimalt 10 per cent each, although the city would pay the entire $139,500 cost of renovations for the Carnegie.

The Carnegie has been designated a heritage building by city council, meaning the 75-year-old structure cannot be demolished or its exterior altered significantly.

City archivist Ainslie Helmeken, who now operates out of cramped quarters on Pandora Avenue above the city parks department, has been trying for years to get permanent quarters for the vast collection of municipal records and historic materials in his care, including some 50,000 photographs.

Two University of Victoria professors, historian Alan Artibise and Maltwood Gallery curator Martin Segger, recently issued a report which urges local municipalities to preserve municipal records and co-operate in building a central Greater Victoria archives.

"The most important heritage asset Greater Victoria has is its public and private records," they said.

Compared to other regions of Canada, their report said Greater Victoria's record of care for its archival material "is not an admirable one."

Large amounts of municipal records are stored where they are susceptible to slow destruction by moisture and dirt, said Artibise and Segger.

Western Europe support is weak

Times News Services

U.S. efforts to put together a boycott of the Moscow Olympics have received scant encouragement from a meeting of Western European sports ministers in Strasbourg, France.

Of the 21 member countries of the Council of Europe, the 30-year-old symbol of European unity, only Britain, the Netherlands and Portugal have voiced support for a boycott.

At the meeting Thursday of ministers and secretaries of state for sport, Sweden, Switzerland, Austria and Cyprus took a strictly neutral line, saying they will leave the decision to their national Olympic committees and not even try to influence them one way or the other.

The other 14 member states also say the decision is up to their Olympic committees, but have not decided whether they will influence them for or against a boycott.

This breakdown was announced by West German Interior Minister Rudolf Baum, who also is in charge of sports and chaired the meeting in the eastern French city.

Even two of the countries listed by the U.S. state departement as officially pro-boycott — Norway and Luxembourg — turned out to be undecided.

Dutch Secretary of State for Sports, C. G. Wallis de Vries, told his colleagues that if they attended the Olympics, they will be letting the Kremlin "use sport for a very bad policy."

He could not see Western sportsmen going to a country "that has crossed the border of another country" with its army, he said.

British Minister for Sports Hector Monro told reporters that European governments lack popular support for a boycott. He blamed politicians, "who have failed to bring home to the people the seriousness of what happened in Afghanistan."

French Sports Minister Jean-Pierre Soisson was most forceful in arguing against a boycott, saying it would be an intolerable mingling of sports and politics.

Monro said that "in a perfect world" sport and politics might be kept separate. "But unfortunately we don't live in a perfect world."

The French placed themselves in the camp that has not yet decided whether or not to influence its Olympic committee's decision, and some detected in this a slight softening of the French position.

The feeling of the Strasbourg conference, suggests The Christian Science Monitor, is fast turning the U.S.-suggested competition into simply dressed-up, post-Olympic event that most athletes would have gone to anyway.

The plan is to elevate already-scheduled world-class events to a festival status — rather than staging the counter-Olympics first proposed by President Carter.

The U.S. apparently has backed down from its original plan because of problems involved in staging such an event from scratch. The White House also has encountered stiff opposition from international sports federations, which refused to sanction an alternative competition that would have been held at the same time as the Olympics.

Lloyd Cutler, the president's legal adviser on the Games, has begun stressing that the competition in no way is a "counter-Olympics" and will be open to all athletes, including the Soviets.

Now, according to U.S. State Department sources, although it is expected that the post-Olympics games will be televised, there will be no special medals, no flag ceremonies and no special anthems for the alternate competitions, which already are planned to be held at several international sites. The State Department hopes to persuade international federations of amateur sports to hold the events over a three-to-four-week period immediately following the Olympics.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Martin Riley, veteran member of the national men's basketball team, said he would support a boycott because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"It's a good cause and measures should be taken because of the Russian invasion," he said while the basketball team continued preparations for an Olympic qualification tournament.

"I've worked hard not for an Olympics," he said. "I've worked hard to play basketball well. Winning a medal is the end result of the Olympics.

"I just want to play basketball well all the time. If we don't participate, I won't feel cheated."

Riley is one of only a few returning players from the team that placed fourth at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan says the government will decide next month whether Canada will support a boycott of the Moscow Games to protest the Afghanistan invasion.

Prime Minister Trudeau has said Canada will support the boycott if there is wide-spread support among Western and Third-World countries.

Canada sent an observer to a meeting in Geneva earlier this week that discussed holding an international sports festival after the Moscow Games, scheduled for July 19-Aug. 3, for athletes from countries which don't go to Moscow.

Riley said the basketball competition at the sports festival would be easier on the nerves than the Olympic competition.

"It would take the tension and pressure out of it and it would be like playing in any other tournament. We would be playing for medals but not Olympic medals."

The junior Merchants new players in Victoria

When brothers Lynn and Jim Chapman were in control of Victoria's Northwest Baseball League franchise, they tried, they said, to drum up some sort of alliance between the Mussels and Victoria's amateur teams.

If anything concrete was offered, it never hardened.

If Robert Peden, the new owner of the NWBL team, is interested in working with amateur talent, the logical place to start would be with Victoria Merchants.

Merchants will be the new team in town this summer. Comprised of players under 21, Merchants are one of two new entries expected to be welcomed into the Pacific Coast Junior League.

Richmond also is "new," along with two Vancouver entries and one each from Burnaby, Surrey and North Shore.

Not much older than the squad he will handle, 23-year-old Randy Price will manage Merchants. Drumming up support for his cause, Price feels it will require $5,000 to get Merchants into the mainland league. Of that sum, $2,000 is being budgeted for travel.

Merchants will play nine-inning games at Lambrick Park on Saturday evenings and seven-inning doubleheaders at Topaz on Sunday afternoon. Eighteen home and 18 away games is not an exhausting schedule, so Merchants also will affilate with Victoria's Senior Amateur League and play exhibition games on Wednesdays.

Merchants' talent will be assembled from the younger players in the senior league and graduates from the Senior Babe Ruth League. Price also will draw on the existing Babe Ruth talent for some weekend appearances with the Merchants.

Before the Merchants call for the first practice in April, Price and his executive are busy solving the budget. They hope to do it persuating the business community to purchase a "share," a uniform, in the new team.

And, says Price, Merchants would welcome any assistance Peden's pro team might offer. "If they have an 18 or 19-year-old they want to keep in town, we would certainly find a spot for him on our roster," says Randy.

Vancouver Canucks, who need friends almost as much as they need victories, didn't solve one of their problems when they turned down a request from the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association recently. The BCAHA, wishing to honor Ernie Gare for his long-time service to hockey, asked if they could present the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's diamond stick award (the CAHA's highest honor) during Wednesday's game against Buffalo Sabres.

That game was chosen because Ernie's boy, Danny, is captain of the Sabres and would have been on hand.

The Canucks say yes, then changed their mind. Inasmuch as they are striving for a playoff position, they didn't want to do anything that might psyche up the Sabres.

Well, on Wednesday, the BCAHA went the "press reception" route. All of Vancouver's media was invited along with a host of other dignitaries and officials and players of the Buffalo team. Ernie Gare got his award, and Danny was on hand.

Conspicious by their absence were the Vancouver Canucks. They weren't invited.

Flora Martin's Victoria rink scored a thrilling 8-7 sudden-death playoff victory over Manitoba today to snap a tie for first place and carry off her fourth Canadian senior women's curling championship in Fredericton, N.B.

It was the second seniors title in a row for the same Martin rink — third Elsie Humphrey, second Verle McKeown and lead Edna Messum — as they won the crown in Vernon last year.

The Victoria rink representing B.C. and Dorothy McKenzie's Winnipeg rink both scored two victories Thursday to end the 11-team round-robin tournament in a tie at the top with 8-2 win-loss records.

But Flora was confident going into the sudden-death playoff game.

"At my age (she's 62), every win is nice," she joked after her two wins Thursday. "But our rink is curling well and we feel confident."

The B.C. rink played confidently, too, but Manitoba stayed with them all they way and Martin had to make a tap-back to score two to win it in the 10th end.

Meanwhile, at Perth, Scotland, the Regina rink representing Canada at the world women's championship lost its touch on tricky ice Thursday and bowed 7-6 to Sweden to create a tie for first place.

The two teams each have seven wins and one loss in the round-robin event. Scotland is in third at 6-2.

The three rinks hold certain playoff berths, with the United States a possible fourth.

The U.S. was 5-3 with only today's morning round left. Sweden was to meet Germany, Canada had to play Norway, standing at 4-4, and the U.S. was to meet Scotland in the last round.

Semi-finals are set for Saturday morning and the final in the afternoon.

Sweden's lone defeat came at the hands of the U.S. in the sixth round.

Canadian skip Marj Mitchell and her rink from the Regina Curling Club offered no excuses for the loss to the Swedes, although it was obvious the ice played a big part.

Skip Elizabeth Hogstrom and her Swedish mates were in difficulties at times too, but were able to capitalize on Regina mistakes in the sixth and eighth ends for three counts after trailing 4-1 prior to blanking the fourth and fifth ends.

In the afternoon, Canada had an easy time putting Scotland away 11-4. The Swedes struggled against Norway before getting a three on the ninth end and a single on the 10th for a 9-7 decision.

In St.John's, Nfld., twelfth-round upsets of three of four leaders and a 13th-round clash between two top teams left Manitoba and Newfoundland rinks tied for first and only four teams still in the running for the Canadian Mixed curling title Thursday.

The Jim Dunstone rink of Winnipeg, Bob McCubbin of Richmond and John Fortier of Charlottetown all suffered 12th-round losses at the hands of lower-ranked teams but Dunstone moved ahead when he stole two from McCubbin to win 9-7 in an extra-ender in the 13th round.

Toby MacDonald of St. John's, who watched the carnage among leaders in the 12th from behind the glass while he had a bye, earned a first-place tie with Dunstone by beating Dick Anderson of Sudbury, Ont., 7-5 in the 13th. The Newfoundlanders and Manitobans both have 7-2 win-loss records. (Scores on page 24).

Cougars reach 100 mark with victory over Breakers

Well, the worst Victoria Cougars can do now is finish second in the Western Hockey League and as well they set a club record as they polished off the Breakers 5-2 in Seattle Thursday night.

With the win, the 50th in 70 games for the Cougars, the Victoria squad clinched at least a second-place finish and they reached the 100-point mark to crack the old club points record of 99 set when they won the league title in 1974-75.

For the Cougars, it was a reversal of their 5-2 loss in Portland and an indication that they are continuing to break out of the scoring slump that has plagued them for a couple of weeks.

The victory left them five points ahead of third-place Regina Pats and three points behind Portland Winter Hawks and, though all three clubs have two games remaining, the Cougars have only a slim chance of snatching the league title away from the Hawks.

To take the title, Victoria needs to beat New Westminster Bruins in their game at 8:30 Saturday night at Memorial Arena and then beat the Breakers Sunday in Seattle while the Winter Hawks would also have to lose at home to Medicine Hat and Seattle.

Cougars were in command all the way in Seattle, outshooting the Breakers 43-29.

Visiting Calgary Wranglers defeated Brandon Wheat Kings 6-4 and Medicine Hat Tigers defeated the Bruins 7-3 in New Westminster in the two other league games.

A chartered bus from Victoria will take fans to the Cougars' playoff games in Portland and Seattle, April 5 and 6. The package includes two nights' motel accommodation, tickets to the games and transportation and cost $70. Those interested should call Charlie Peterson at 477-3027.

Red Wings' owner wants conflict settled

DETROIT (AP) — The owner of Detroit Red Wings has told general manager Ted Lindsay to "straighten out" the conflict between the National Hockey League club's players and coach Bobby Kromm.

"I'm certainly disappointed with the way they're playing," said owner Bruce Norris. "I told Teddy to straighten it out."

Lindsay has accompanied the Red Wings during their current three-game western trip. They play in Vancouver tonight.

"And I don't particularly care for the criticism of Bobby (Kromm) by the players," Norris said Thursday from his Miami home. "Bobby was coach-of-the-year one season. You can't be a bum the next."

The Red Wings, however, currently are 24-36-11 and in danger of missing the NHL playoffs. They rank 17th in the 21-team league. Only the top 16 teams advance to post-season play.

Recently, some players have blamed Kromm for the team's poor performance. Centre Dale McCourt earlier this week said the coach no longer had the respect of his players.

Trouble for NASL; 'Caps here tonight

Financial problems for some franchises and the insertion of a third native player in the starting lineup will slow the over-all improvement of the North American Soccer League in 1980, team manager Tony Waiters of Vancouver Whitecaps said Thursday.

Waiters, who brings his Whitecaps squad over to play the Vancouver Island Selects at 7 tonight at Royal Athletic Park, said the NASL won't advance as much as it has in the last couple of seasons because some teams "caught a bit of a cold financially last year."

"Those teams therefore have been reluctant to put more money into stengthening the quality of players coming into the clubs," said Waiters. "They've had to work going into the season on very tight budgets."

NASL teams in 1979, when Vancouver emerged as Soccer Bowl champion, were required to start two North Americans and this season that number has been increased to three, something which Waiters isn't in agreement with despite the Whitecaps' considerable strength in this area.

Injury jinx strikes

By The Canadian Press

The injury jinx continued Thursday to hit pitchers Mark Fidrych of Detroit Tigers and Larry Christenson of Philadelphia Phillies.

Fidrych, who has been plagued by arm trouble since winning rookie-of-the-year honors in 1976, was lifted after 2 1-3 innings Thursday when a muscle in his right arm tightened during the Tigers' 10-4 exhibition loss to the Phillies.

Fidrych, who surrendered a three-run double to Pete Rose in Philadelphia's four-run second inning, said the stiffness was not related to his previous problems.

Meanwhile, Christenson, who suffered three disabling injuries last year, had to be carried off on a stretcher in the third inning when a line drive off the bat of Jason Thompson caught him behind the left knee. However, x-rays showed only a bad bruise.

Boycott would blow best medal chances

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian gymnasts are out to prove they are world-class athletes and don't want an Olympic boycott or an untimely injury to snuff out their medal chances.

"For quite a few of them it will be their only chance at an Olympics," says Rob Paradis, men's program co-ordinator of the Canadian Gymnastics Association.

"They really want to go and do well."

The men's and women's teams, which qualified for only the second time in 24 years, will be chosen at trials in May and June.

Canadians have never won medals in 20 years of Olympic competition, but hopes are high that Philip Delesalle of Victoria, Karen Kelsall of Surrey or Elfi Schlegel of Toronto might pull an upset — if they and others stay healthy.

Several Olympic team hopefuls, including Delesalle, Warren Long of Victoria, Monica Gormann of Winnipeg and Sherry Hawco of Cambridge, Ont., were plagued by injuries last year.

Delesalle and Long had back problems and Kelsall was out for a year with a knee injury. Gormann has a chronic ankle injury, Hawco has just recovered from a fractured leg and Carmen Alie of Montreal has a chronic knee problem.

"And they're still on that fine line," says Lynn Sinclair, women's program co-ordinator.

"If they blow one meet through injury or poor performance, they're gone."

Delesalle is Canada's best chance for a medal in either the pommel horse or parallel bars. Although virtually unknown in Canada, he has a large following in Europe and is considered one of the best in those two events.

Delesalle finished in 22nd place in Montreal four years ago and Kelsall 27th.

The women's team has competed in every Olympics since 1968, the only year Canada had a men's team entered.

If everyone stays healthy, the men could break into the top 10 for the first time. The women would like to improve on their ninth place finish at the Montreal Olympics in 1976. They were 11th-place finishers in 1968 and 1972.

Paradis said there probably will be few surprises at the Olympic trials May 16-18 in Alma, Que. Each team has six places. The men's team will be chosen on the final day while the women compete again in June at a location to be named shortly.

Delesalle, Long, Dan Gaudet and Mark Epprecht of Toronto and Pierre Clavel and Jean Choquette of Montreal are favored to win spots on the men's teams.

Dark horses include Marty Sharpe of Winnipeg, former Victorian Owen Walstrom, now of Vancouver, Nigel Rothwell of Windsor, Ont., Frank Nutzenberger and Dave Steeper of Toronto and Andre Vallerand of Montreal. There will be one alternate chosen.

The women's team will probably be made up of Kelsall, Schlegel, Gormann, Hawco, Alie and Diane Carnegie of Toronto.

Hopefuls include Shannon Fleming and Kathy McMorrow of Toronto and Patti-Jo Knorr and Linda Bartolini of Cambridge. The women will have two alternates.

Loo, Norton make 21 popular tenpin tally

Jessie Loo and R.J. Norton made 221 a popular number in the 22nd week of the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition.

Both included a 221 tally and one other over-200 game in series at Mayfair Lanes on the the way to winning weekly awards in the contest's tenpin section and qualifying for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Jessie set the pace in the women's division as she rattled the pins for a slick 193-221-207—621 series in the Ladies' Classic League and R.J. started with a 221 and followed with efforts of 224 and 188 in the Wednesday Commercial League for a total of 633 and first place in the men's division.

Irwin ready to come back

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hale Irwin, in a slump since winning the World Cup individual golf title last fall, says he has "bottomed out and on the way up again."

He took a big step in the right direction Thursday with a wind-blown, five-under-par 67 that put him into a tie for the lead with Steve Melnyk after the first round of the Tournament Players Championship.

While their scores were the same, the conditions under which they were compiled were totally different.

"All I can say is that the fellows who played in the morning got one hell of a break," said Irwin, the U.S. Open champion, who played the tough Sawgrass in afternoon winds that gusted to 35 kilometres an hour. "The conditions really were very difficult."

But the morning half of the field — which produced 10 of the top 12 scorers for the day — played in absolute calm, which robbed the 7,000-yard Sawgrass layout of its traditional defences — howling winds.

"Conditions were virtually perfect," Melnyk said after completing his bogey-free morning round. "It was delightful. Obviously, it was not a Sawgrass day. The red numbers (indicating scores below par) just kept popping up."

But they popped up with much less frequency in the afternoon.

Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., shot an opening-round 72, while Jim Nelford of Burnaby was another two strokes back.

Palmateer deals Flyers a shutout

By The Canadian Press

Pat Quinn had been coach of Philadelphia Flyers for 105 games, and he had yet to feel the pangs of a shutout. That's no longer the case.

Wilf Paiement scored the first goal and set up two others, both on power plays, as Toronto Maple Leafs blanked the Flyers 3-0 in their National Hockey League game Thursday.

Linemates Terry Martin and Darryl Sittler were the recipients of Paiement's assists. Both scored with the Flyers' Moose Dupont in the penalty box.

"I guess you could say I lost my cool," Dupont said of a double minor he got for taking a swipe at forward Laurie Boschman. "It was a bad time for the Moose. I guess you could say he (Boschman) got the best of me."

"I don't know if it's hitting the bottom or not, but it certainly wasn't one of our better efforts," said Quinn, whose Flyers have a 4-4-4 won-lost-tied record in their last 12 games.

It was certainly not the same team that posted a 35-game unbeaten streak earlier in the season, an NHL record.

In other contests, Atlanta Flames bombed St. Louis Blues 8-4 and Quebec Nordiques beat Colorado Rockies 6-2.

"We appeared frustrated," Quinn said after the Flyers' ninth loss of the season. "Everybody appears to be angry with what's happened to us the last few weeks.

"You see it in the early penalties we took. We're just not concentrating and when you're not concentrating in this game, you're in trouble."

The Flyers had good reason to be frustrated. His name was Mike Palmateer, the Toronto goalie who missed 28 games with an ankle injury before returning to action in a 3-3 tie with the Flyers on March 1. Philadelphia pounded him with 34 shots, but only a third were of consequence and only twice could the Flyers control a rebound for a second shot.

"I thought they were coming at us pretty hard," said Palmateer. "But we really played well in our own end. We made them shoot the puck in rather than carry it in the way they did the last game.

"It's special to a goaltender any time you get a shutout," he said of his second shutout of the season. "But you've got to get a certain amount of luck, too. A goalie never plays a perfect game, so he's got to get some breaks."

Palmateer's biggest break came in the second period. Bobby Clarke threw a faceoff back to Reggie Leach about halfway up the slot. Leach drilled a bullet which Palmateer never saw. He only heard it ringing off the right post, and sliding wide.

Flames deny Calgary sale

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta owner Tom Cousins denied Thursday there were ongoing negotiations for the sale of the National Hockey League Flames to a Calgary business group.

"The team has not been sold. It hasn't even been offered for sale," Cousins said in a statement.

Cousins, said a club official, "went through the ceiling" when told of the report by the Toronto Globe and Mail in its Thursday editions.

Bob Kent, president of the club, also denied the report.

"I deny anything is ongoing with Calgary," Kent said of the newspaper's report that the Flames were negotiating the $14 million sale of the financially-plagued Atlanta club to Calgary businessmen Darryl, Donald and Byron Seaman.

"I think it is well established that the Toronto Globe and Mail knows something we don't know," said Kent. "About two or three weeks ago they also speculated the same thing.

"We have received expressions of interest from Calgary, Houston, Dallas and the Meadowlands. What I can tell you is to lay to rest that rumor, precisely, that there are no ongoing negotiations with Calgary at this time.

"We are trying to find ways to keep the club here. I think . . . everything has been said. Tom Cousins made it clear, he is trying everything to keep the team in Atlanta," he said.

Kent said the Flames had lost close to $2 million last season and "we expect to lose $2.5 million this year, but we certainly are not prepared to say at this time we are going to leave Atlanta."

The Flames, who paid $6 million to enter the NHL in 1972, have drawn an average 12,319 persons during their seven previous years in the league but are under 9,000 this season despite a winning record.

The Toronto newspaper report said an unidentified NHL governor said the Atlanta club is the only one that does not require unanimous consent of the board of governors to relocate — as long as it does not infringe on the territorial rights of an existing franchise.

"It was an exceptional condition that was granted Mr. Cousins when he agreed to keep the franchise from going under because of financial difficulties in 1977," the source told the newspaper.

Juniors, CAHA at odds over old problem again

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Major Junior Hockey League and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association are headed for a showdown that may result in a split between the two organizations.

The two sides are at odds with each other over development money and the CMJHL's proposal for a new, close affiliation with the Mational Hockey League.

CMJHL executive director Dave Branch said a split would mean little to his league "except that we have a moral obligation to minor hockey and we would not like to end" that relationship.

CAHA president Murray Costello said the CMJHL would suffer from a separation because that would force CMJHL clubs playing in Ontario to begin paying amusement tax from which provincial law now exempts clubs registered with the CAHA.

He also said the CAHA would "fill the void left by the CMJHL's departure" by forming a new major-minor league to which minors players would advance instead of the CMJHL.

Branch and Costello are to meet April 1 in Regina to try to reach a settlement but both agree the chances of a separation are strong.

Th CAHA has governed minor hockey in Canada for the last 63 years, but in 1973 it granted the Western Hockey League and the Ontario and Quebec Major Junior leagues autonomy under the umbrella of the CMJHL.

Part of the agreement that resulted in the autonomy entailed development fees and the two sides now disagree over who owes what.

The CAHA maintains the CMJHL has come up short on the development fees since 1977. But the CMJHL disagrees.

"Any allegations to suggest that we have not met our commitments are absolutely false," said Branch. "We have no debts to the CAHA because we don't have the finances to put more money into minor hockey. Simply, it is financially impossible for us to put forth more development fees. And I would strongly doubt that we'll be able to next year."

He said the CMJHL gave $793,000 to minor hockey in 1978 while taking in $713,000 from the NHL.

"Murray Costello is new to the job and perhaps he just doesn't understand this," Branch said.

He said the CMJHL would work with provincial bodies that govern hockey, such as the Ontario Hockey Association and Quebec Ice Hockey Federation, if they can't reach an accord with the CAHA.

"That's ridiculous," said Costello. "Those branches are two of the branches that constitute the CAHA."

Carner struggling

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — She may be tied for 45th and eight strokes back of leader Jo Ann Washam after 18 holes of the $200,000 Ladies Professional Golfers' Association national pro-am tournament, but JoAnne Carner is hardly counting herself out.

"There's still a lot of golf to be played, and eight shots isn't a lot to make up over 54 holes," Carner said Thursday after she struggled to an opening 76.

There may be a tendency to dismiss such optimism, but Carner has made the LPGA tour her own so far this year, winning four of the five tournaments she's entered — including the last three events.

Washam grabbed the first-round lead with a four-under-par 68, followed by Janet Coles and Hollis Stacy at 70 and Cathy Morse and Donna Caponi Young at 71. Defending champion Nancy Lopez-Melton was five strokes off the pace with a 73.

City team in pin final

Victoria has a senior team in the national Youth Bowling Council fivepin finals for the first time.

Representing British Columbia in the YBC finals at London, Ont., in May will be the Town and Country Lanes senior boys' team of Rick Benn, Don Descoteau, Dennis Greig, Bob Finlay and Ross Jones, who won the provincial title in competition at Port Moody.

Ballard applies pressure for new Hamilton stadium

HAMILTON (CP) — Harold Ballard, owner of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, has threatened to move his Canadian Football League franchise unless the city builds him a new football stadium.

Ballard confirmed this week that he has had preliminary talks with a group interested in moving the CFL club to London, Ont.

"I have to do something," said Ballard, who is also owner of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League. "Last year we lost close to a million dollars and I don't want to keep doing that."

Ballard also withdrew is offer to build new stands at Ivor Wynne Stadium. He added that if Hamilton wanted a NHL franchise he would waive his $10 million claim to territorial rights providing the city builds him a football stadium.

Last week Ballard offered to build the new stands in return for free rent until they were paid for. They would then be handed back to the city for $1.

"I talked with my banker and they're talking interest rates of 20 percent," Ballard said. "There's no way I could ever recoup my losses."

Hamilton Mayor Jack MacDonald agreed that there is a need for a new stadium.

"I recognize the facility in Hamilton requires another look," MacDonald said. "We have to be competitive with the rest of the country. The time is approaching when we're going to have to decide we're either in football or we're not and the appropriate time is now."

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

See the province from a cycle seat

A somewhat unusual tour of the province is planned this summer by an unorganised group of veteran cyclists calling themselves the Sidney Velo-Vets.

The group hopes to get up to a maximum of 12 riders all aged 40 or over to cycle for two weeks in July from Hope through Princeton, Oliver, Trail, Kimberley, Radium, to Lake Louise and Jasper and then back along the Yellowhead Highway to Kamloops, Merritt, Princeton and Hope.

Cyclists may join for all or any part of the tour but they must be prepared to ride up to 100 miles per day, with stops for meals.

A van and trailer will accompany the cyclists carrying all baggage and someone to do the cooking.

Cost of the tour, including food, campground fees and gas for the van, is expected to work out to around $10 to $15 per day per cyclist. Anyone interested should call Errol Thornton at 652-3551.

With the United States' new marine sanitation laws, which require holding tanks or use of a head which disinfects the effluent, now in effect, Victoria boaters will undoubtedly spend more time cruising in our own waters this year.

With this in mind, a good investment would be $9 for the Canadian Hydrographic Service's new Edition of Sailing Directions for British Columbia, which is available at the Institute of Ocean Sciences in Sidney and at authorized chart dealers.

The edition contains major revisions that reflect the changes in regulations, vessel traffic management systems, search and rescue facilities and procedures, as well as electronic navigation systems.

There is a lot of new information on tides and tidal streams, particularly for the Strait of Juan de Fuca, Haro Streit, Vancouver harbor, Johnstone Strait, Broughton Strait and Queen Charlotte Strait.

The geographic chapters for the south and of Vancouver Island -from Alberni to Campbell River— have also been extensivly revised to conform with the new metric charts for these areas. All major ports covered in this edition have been updated to include such information as new berthing facilities.

A total of 121 boats, some from Port Angeles, Friday Harbor, Sidney and Esquimalt, gathered at Cadboro Bay on the weekend for the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's second annual T.H.R.A.S.H. (Thank Heaven Racing And Spring Are Here) Regatta.

The race committee ran a flawless event and winds of 20 to 35 knots kept things very much on the move.

While emphasis was on division racing, Vidas Stukas' Jan was certainly the star of the show. Vidas sailed his Dragon to first place four times in Division E, Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet competition, winning trophies for best in his division and most outstanding performance. Runners-up in Division E were the Port Angeles-based boat Rainbow Chaser and Bruce Klaver's Wings.

In one-design racing, the top three Cal 20s were Ken Wilson's Manitou, Peter Harrison's Sunbeam and Blair Humphrey's Ookpik. Rod McBride's Lemolo won in Thunderbird competition. John Davies helmed his new T'Bird Scooter to second spot and Gordy Nickells' Redskin finished third.

The top Catalina 27s were Gerry Porter's Lickety Split, Geoff Buck's Buckshot and Ron Jewula's Beowulf. David Adams' Menehune finished first in racing for Viking 33s and 34s. Runners-up were Jim Morris' Madeleine and R.C. Smith's Finesse.

Soren Isbrand was one of the hard-working race committee so he handed over his Danish Pastry to Nick Thornton to race her in Division A, PHRF. Nick returned the compliment by winning top honors, edging out Jim Allen's Tiffany and Sven Donaldson's Achates from Vancouver.

Top Division B PHRF boats were Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer, Louis Lindholm's Annie Cadby and Ross Mathewson's Kotuku. Leading in Division F PHRF competition were Bob Callow's Minstrel, Doug Bond's Gwaihir and Knotsure, owned by Sid Bryant and Frank Piddington.

To Rick Todd went the dubious distinction of winning the T.H.R.A.S.H Can, earned by the numerous difficulties he and his crew found themselves in aboard Rick's Pacific 30 Outpatient.

The club will have two around-the-buoys races this Sunday. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

There will be plenty of activity in Esquimalt Harbor on Sunday when the Esquimalt Squadron; Canadian Forces Sailing Association, hosts a regatta for Vancouver Island Hobie Cat enthusiasts. Sailors from Nanaimo and Campbell River will be here to pit their skills against the local competition.

Bill Young, who recently bought a Hobie Cat 16, has organized the affair and says there will be at least three races and, hopefully, five if the wind co-operates. Racing should get under way around 11 a.m.

In addition, there will be series racing for the squadron's Laser fleet and a race for keel boats, which begins at 1 p.m. Top Laser sailors last Sunday were Maurice Robinson, Olav Thyvold Jr., Frank Towler and Geof Danvers.

Richard Grimsdell is organizing the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club's sortie on the Cowichan River this Sunday. The trip, which will take place in the canyon area below Skutz Falls, is for kayaks and closed canoes. Members should be at the Helmcken Road parking lot by 10 a.m. Richard can be reached at 598-1775.

At the same time other members will join Barb and Harry Marsh for an exploration of Beaver and Elk Lakes. Give them a ring at 478-5178 for more details.

Club members Doug O'Brien and Jill Evans placed third in mixed competition at the fourth annual Cowichan River races held last Sunday. Allan and Ruth Makson of Nanaimo won the event, runners-up being Arnold and Loriette Joe of Duncan.

Fellow club member Henry Pejril teamed up with Keith Muir of Cowichan Bay to place second in the recreational division, being beaten out by Arnold Joe and Wesley Voth of Duncan. In third spot were Gordon Lazarowich and Blair Rolin of Maple Ridge.

Arvid and Paul Charlie of Duncan topped the open division, second-placers being Ron Daniels and Wayne Charlie of Duncan. In third spot were Jim Lindsay of Ruskin and Ken Williams of Maple Ridge.

Chief of Canada's air force suddenly quits

OTTAWA (CP) — The head of the Canadian air force has astonished his colleagues by announcing that he is retiring April 1 for personal reasons.

Lt.-Gen. G. Allan MacKenzie, 49, presented his resignation to the chief of defence staff here Wednesday and then announced his action to a shocked meeting of his staff in Winnipeg Thursday.

He gave no details of his personal reason, said he was going on annual leave immediately, sent a message of farewell to his men in the Canadian Armed Forces air command and went home.

"I feel I have contributed what I can and I can not contribute anymore," he said in an interview from Winnipeg. "It is time to look for another challenge."

He said he has considered what he should do for some time but only reached a decision this week. He flew to Ottawa, discussed the matter with Admiral Robert Falls, the defence chief, and submitted his resignation.

As one of the eight lieutenant-generals in the armed forces, presumably he had a chance of taking ofer Falls's job when the latter moves to a position with NATO in Wurope in the spring.

But he was emphatic in saying that his chances for the top military job in the country, or lack of it, had nothing to do with his decision.

Those who were at his regular staff meeting Thursday said they were stunned by the general's announcement.

"I have some news for you," he said after hearing the usual reports.

Then he said he had submitted his resignation for personal reasons and was leaving immediately. As the staff members sat in a state of shock he left.

Because he has served lightly less than 30 years in the forces, the general will leave without full pension.

He said he has enjoyed most of his career, which started in 1951 in the then Royal Canadian Air Force. He was fortunate enough to reach the top in the element he loved — the air.

Now he would like to do something in the private sector.

The general said the forthcoming decision of the government to acquire a new fighter for the air force has nothing to do with his resignation. He was content with the armed forces' choice, which is reported to be the F-18L made by McDonnell Douglas. The new defence minister, Gilles Lamontagne, will announce a decision on the $2.3 billion fighter purchase within a months.

Gen. MacKenzie was born in Kingston, Jamaica, and spent his early life there. He flew with British West Indies Airlines until he joined the RCAF. His early career was spent flying transports. He flew in United Nations operations in the Middle East, Cyprus and The Congo.

Although he served in Trenton, Ont., for a time and although air force headquarters is in Winnipeg, he calls Ottawa and Halifax his two homes.

He served in several senior positions in Maritime Command in Halifax and at national defence headquaters here before going to Winnipeg as deputy commander of Air Command. He became commander in August, 1978.

The general sent a message to airmen from coast to coast saying he's leaving for personal reasons.

"Let me assure you that in leaving I reget that this will mean a termination of our professional association," he said.

"There is a great deal that remains to be accomplished and I take comfort that we have people like you to face those challenges.

"To say that I have enjoyed working with you is an understatement.

"I have been privileged. Thank you for your support and dedication. Please accept my heart-felt best wishes for your future."

The Changeling gets eight in Canada's Genie awards

TORONTO (CP) — What producers Joel Michaels and Garth Drabinsky needed most following the Genie Awards presentation Thursday night was some breathing space, relief from the back-slappers and a chance to realize the impact of their outstanding victory.

They emerged stars of the Academy of Canadian Cinema presentation as their entry, The Changeling, scooped eight awards from its 10 nominations.

"Y'know, we were always very cautiously optimistic about the results, but really, God only knew what would happen," Drabinsky said in an interview following the nationally televised awards show.

"I've got to offer a correction to that," partner Michaels interjected. "Garth called it — he thought we were going to win a goodly number of those awards and I was a little more conservative. He was right and I was wrong. Thank goodness he was right."

The Changeling, starring George C. Scott and his off-stage wife Trish Van Devere, is a gripping film about a composer who takes up residence in an old house that's possessed by the ghost of a child who was killed there 70 years earlier. Whereas the house had previously rejected any would-be occupants, it apparently wants the musician (Scott) to stay.

Shot mainly in Vancouver and Victoria, The Changeling is scheduled for international release soon.

The Changeling was named best motion picture, Scott best foreign actor and Van Devere best foreign actress.

The film also won for best cinematography, best screenplay adapted from another medium, best sound editing, best over-all sound and best art direction.

Neither Scott nor his wife were on hand to accept their awards. Miss Van Devere, who was to have attended, sent word Wednesday that she is fighting a flu bug in Germany where she and Scott are filming.

It will be interesting to see whether Scott does in fact accept his Genie.

He has refused to compete in America's Oscar awards — even to the point of turning down a win — because he doesn't believe in the concept of matching artistic merit among his peers.

Canadian actor Christopher Plummer, who starred in The Silent Partner — a Drabinski-Michaels film that took six prizes at last year's Canadian film awards — got the nod this year for best actor in Murder By Decree, a Canada-Britain co-production.

BELLY UP, dead fish keep surfacing at Driedmeat Lake near Camrose, Alta., as local resident Neil Tollefson watches. Biologists blame the fish kill on liquids discharged from the city's sewage lagoons.

Bored wife-swappers blamed

EDMONTON (CP) — Bored wife-swappers looking for new kicks may have been responsible for Alberta's cattle mutilations last summer, a noted expert on cults said Thursday.

"Call it satanism, voodoism or what you like, I don't take seriously any religious implications in the problem," Rev. Colin Clay told a University of Alberta chaplains' symposium.

The people involved "were probably middle-aged, affluent people bored with what they were doing," Clay said. "They are the same type of people who swap wives."

Last summer a rash of mutilations of cattle organs, including genitals, occurred in Alberta, mainly in the southern part of the province. No one was ever arrested.

The University of Saskatchewan chaplain, considered a leader in the counter-cult movement, said most of the recent "so-called religious movements" have religion way down on their list of priorities.

Society is to blame for spawning cults which offer vulnerable idealists promises of change, Clay said.

"Business and government are too big and churches have failed to meet the needs of the young," he said.

While a government investigation into cults would not be a bad idea, education is the most important solution, he added.

Dolphin plight cuts strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Disoriented dolphins at the city aquarium heard familiar voices Thursday and all but one of them temporarily ended a worrisome hunger strike.

The mammals have been eating little or nothing at all since their regular trainers, members of the municipal blue collar workers' union, began their own strike nearly six weeks ago.

But the dolphins' moods — and appetites — improved dramatically Thursday when the four trainers arrived on a mission of mercy under the auspices of an emergency services agreement between the city and union.

By Thursday night, Brigitte, Judith, Carole and Kim all had tucked away hearty meals of fish, although nothing compared with the seven kilograms they normally eat each day. Fanny, however, was still turning up her snout at the offerings.

A sixth, Pierrot, has been eating well despite the disruption of his training routine.

Hospitals, highways in Alta. throne speech

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government opened the spring session of the legislature Thursday with promises of more hospitals and better highways, but opposition members reacted bitterly to what they termed "complacent" failure to address urgent housing issues.

Opposition Leader Bob Clark said his four Social Credit members in the 79-seat house will press for an emergency debate on interest rates affecting farmers and an estimated 25,000 homeowners renegotiating mortgages this year.

The government's new interest in building hospitals was a tacit admission of past failures, Clark said after hearing Lt.-Gov. Frank Lynch-Staunton read the speech from the throne.

Peter Lougheed's Progressive Conservative government has finally realized there is more to government than energy but produced a "very unimaginative speech, a speech that spent much of its time apologizing for what didn't get done in the Seventies."

NDP Leader Grant Notley condemned the speech for omissions, saying, "We're not committing ourselves to land banking; we're not committing ourselves to interest-shielding.

"What they're attempting to do is shuffle people issues off to the side."

Ex-CIA man hired to make bombs

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A former employee of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency said Thursday he made two bombs in 1974 at the request of a Toronto firm of private investigators.

William Richardson told Peel County court that the bombs — a smoke bomb and a mock explosive made with materials known to explode in larger quantities — were commissioned by Centurion Investigations Ltd. to frighten radicals at the McDonnell Douglas of Canada Ltd. aircraft plant in Mississauga, Ont.

Richardson was presenting evidence at the trial of the firm, its part-owner Daniel McGarry, 45, and William Nykyforchyn, 42, former director of the firm's intelligence department.

The company and the two men are charged with conspiracy to commit public mischief by planting a mock bomb and three stolen tools in the car of an Arab immigrant employed at Ralph Milrod Metals Products Ltd., a Mississauga company then owned by International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

Richardson's testimony concerned a separate incident.

One foot out, house to go

MONTREAL (CP) — A couple in north end St. Leonard got a shock Thursday when they found out the house they bought last October was ordered torn down by a court order because it is 30 centimetres (one foot) too close to the street.

"I don't believe it; this is a joke," said Jean-Claude and Colette Cote when they heard the news. Mr. Justice Andre Savoie of Quebec Superior Court ordered the duplex, built in 1979, demolished within 90 days because it contravenes a city bylaw.

Cote said he didn't know that the city of St. Leonard had already launched legal proceedings against the builder of the house when he bought it.

Cancer society switches policy on checkups

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Many Americans need far fewer cancer tests than their doctors have been recommending, and most don't need an annual physical examination to check for cancer until after age 40, the American Cancer Society has concluded.

In a major change of policy, the society Thursday said it is dropping its recommendation that some routine cancer tests be given every year.

Among these are breast exams and Pap smears, which it no longer recommends for all women every year, and annual x-rays, which it calls unnecessary for symptom-free persons.

The changes were prompted by wide medical feeling that too many tests may find only a negligible number of cancers at great dollar cost. A sparer, better-designed test schedule may both find more cancers and produce more cures, cancer society officials maintained.

Here are the society's revised recommendations:

— A cancer checkup and health counselling every three years for everyone over age 20, annually for all over 40.

— Continued monthly breast self-examination by women over 20. Breast examination by a doctor every three years from ages 20 to 40, then annually. One baseline breast x-ray between 35 and 40, then an annual x-ray after 50.

— A Pap smear test for cancer of the cervix (lower womb) every three years (if two exams a year apart have been negative) for women 20 to 65 and younger, sexually active women. A pelvic exam every three years from 20 to 40, then every year. A single test of an endometrial (womb lining) sample at menopause for women at high risk because of obestity, use of estrogens or medical history.

— An annual manual rectal examination by a doctor with a guaiac (chemical) slide test of a stool sample for everyone over 40. More extensive slide textine annually after 50. Sigmoidoscopy (an instrument probe of the rectum, often called proctoscopy) every three years after 50, if two exams a year apart have been negative.

The recommendations were based on opinions by experts in all fields of cancer. They reviewed each cancer's frequency, the age when it usually appears and the good, or harm, each test may do.

Unneeded X-rays, for example, waste money and expose the patient to radiation, unnecessarily.

While the cancer society has not urged an annual physical in exact words, its slogans — get "periodic" or "regular" physicals and fight cancer "with a cheque and a checkup" — have "very much implied" the need for annual physicals, said Dr. Sol B. Gusberg of Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York City, the society's president.

Today, he said, "we have to ask some better questions," like what is most cost-effective, what is most effective medically, what is most practical?

"These are general guidelines, he added.

A panel of the Institute of Medicine at the National Academy of Sciences recommended:

— A complete checkup for all at age 18 or soon after.

— Then visits every five years starting at age 25.

Visits every 2½ years, with the alternate visits limited to fewer tests after 40.

— Visits every two years after 60 and every year after 75.

How does a person know hwn he or she is getting a good cancer checkup?

The examining doctor, said Dr. Gusberg, should always examine the "oral cavity, neck and thyroid gland, other glands and lymph nodes, breasts, abdomen, the pelvis in women and testes in men, do a rectal exam and a slide test of the stool — and look at the whole body and skin" from top to bottom.

Kansas firemen fired

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Strikers crowded city jails today as officials battling the second firefighters walkout in three months issued contempt citations to 700 union members and pledged to start firing dozens more unless they return to work.

Personnel Director Thomas Lewinsohn said the city would begin mailing out termination notices today to 143 firefighters who left their jobs Monday unless a settlement was reached or firemen returned to their jobs. Once the notices are mailed, he said, the firings will be "irrevocable."

A total of 71 firefighters are imprisoned on 20-day sentences for violating a no-strike order issued in December.

"We're going to go after them all," announced special prosecutor John Gibson, saying he will seek court sanctions against every firefighter in the 900-member union.

Meanwhile, 30 more fires were reported Thursday — none serious.

$3B Maginot?

CAIRO (AP) — Libya is building a 300-kilometre-long concrete wall on its border with Egypt, a $3-billion, seven-year project that is planned to be 100 times stronger than the Maginot Line, the semi-official Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram says.

There was no immediate comment from Libya.

2M Cambodian deaths blamed on Vietnamese

BANGKOK (AP) — A representative of Cambodia's ousted Pol Pot government claimed Thursday the Vietnam-backed Phnom Penh government has killed more than two million Cambodians since seizing power last year.

Delegates from Vietnam, the Soviet Union and Laos walked out of the UN economic meeting as he was granted permission to speak.

The walkout at the 36th session of the UN Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific came shortly before Thiounn Thioum, finance minister of the jungle government fighting a guerrilla war against the Phnom Penh regime, accused the Vietnamese of waging an extermination campaign against his people.

"More than 250,000 Vietnamese troops of aggression continue to occupy our main cities, carry out a special war of racial extermination against the people of Cambodia and transform Cambodia into a Vietnamese colony of settlement," he said.

"The war of aggression in Cambodia is far from ending. It has developed and intensified in the dry season and is certain to spill over into Thailand and the whole region of Southeast Asia."

The Pol Pot government, rather than the Vietnam-backed Heng Samrin government that ousted it in January 1979, is seated at the meeting because the United Nations continues to recognize it.

The Pol Pot government itself has been accused of causing the death of two million to three million people through starvation, disease and mass executions durings its four years of rule.

The UN meeting, convened to review commission projects for 1979 and plan development strategies for 1980, has turned into a forum for verbal attacks between the Soviet and Chinese camps.

On Wednesday, Chinese and Soviet delegates accused each other of "barbaric acts" and blamed the other for disrupting the economy of the Asia-Pacific region.

Non-unions giving you grief? Try plugging into stimulator!

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A low-level electric current running through a fractured limb can help broken bones to mend, according to manufacturers of a new device known as a bone growth stimulator.

The New Jersey manufacturer of one of the machines says patients are required to sit with two electromagnetic coils attached to each side of a broken limb and stay plugged into an electric power point for 12 hours a day.

An Indiana manufacturer sells a tiny battery unit which is inserted beneath bandages or a plaster cast and transmits the low-level current to metal pins implanted in the bone on each side of the fracture.

Both devices have been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) as being effective and safe in the treatment of broken bones, according to FDA spokesman Bill Rados.

The bone growth stimulators are particularly aimed at fractures which fail to heal, known among orthopedists as non-unions.

A third device approved by the FDA is made by an Australian company, Telectronics Ltd. of Lane Cove, New South Wales.

Joyce Eyerly of Zimmer USA, which manufactures the battery unit in Warsaw, Ind., said the current is so low that the patient cannot feel it.

Both Eyerly and Robert Marston, spokesman for Electrobiology Inc. of Fairfield, N.J., said the device grew out of a discovery in the 1950s that human bones had an electric current known as electronegative which was interrupted when bones were badly fractured.

"We thought if we could make the bone electronegative again, we could start the healing process," she said.

Among patients using the devices were people whose fractures had failed to heal for up to three years, the two companies said.

Eyerly said after 12 weeks of constantly using the battery device, x-ray tests usually showed that the fracture was beginning to heal.

Marston said the full healing process could take up to a year for big bones.

Marston said patients who use the coils, which pulse an electromagnetic field through the limb, usually have their device plugged into to an electric power point during their eight hours of sleep.

Weekend of waiting in Bogota

BOGOTA (AP) — The 32 hostages in the embassy of the Dominican Republic faced another weekend of housekeeping chores and games of cards and dominoes as the resumption of negotiations for their release was postponed until Monday.

The Colombian government agreed Thursday to a request from the hostages and the M-19 guerrillas holding them to resume direct talks. The sixth negotiating session was set for today and then postponed until Monday afternoon.

The hostages include 19 diplomats and today is their 24th day of captivity, since about 30 guerrillas invaded the embassy during a diplomatic reception Feb. 27.

Afghan 'Christmas' cancelled

United Press International

Afghan President Babrak Karmal predicted Thursday Soviet forces will remain in Afghanistan indefinitely and rebel spokesman said fears of renewed anti-Soviet rioting in Kabul forced the government to cancel Moslem New Year celebrations.

Karmal, in a broadcast on Radio Kabul monitored in London, said most of the Soviet soldiers would "definitely remain here as long as there is the smallest sign of provocation, interference or external aggression against Afghanistan and as long as these things are not completely uprooted."

An estimated 80,000 Soviet forces have been in Afghanistan since the Dec. 27 Soviet-backed coup installed Karmal.

In a related development, the government announced cancellation of Friday's traditional Moslem New Year celebrations in the capital of Kabul, citing bad weather.

But an Afghan rebel spokesman in New Delhi, India claimed the cancellation came after the government uncovered rebel plans to incite thousands of festival-goers into another anti-Soviet uprising like the one last month.

"It is a national festival. Usually 100,000 people or more gather from all provinces. Like you celebrate Christmas, we celebrate this," the rebel said. "The festival has never, never been cancelled in living memory. It has been held in snow and rain . . . The government found an uprising plan and is 100 per cent afraid there would be an uprising and they would have to kill thousands."

Meanwhile, Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr warned Moscow today the Soviet Union must get out of Afghanistan "whether you like it or not" because "we could not tolerate the presence of your armed forces in our neighborhood.

". . . Secondly, we could not, in accordance with our Islamic duty, see a Moslem nation under the occupation of foreign forces. Thirdly, in the light of our global duty and as a revolutionary nation, we cannot tolerate such overt aggression.

There were fierce anti-Soviet riots in Kabul and elsewhere in February, and the government charged Pakistani, Chinese and Americans were involved in planning the troubles. Hundreds of people were killed wounded or arrested.

Unconfirmed reports from rebels in Peshawar, Pakistan, said hundreds of villagers in eastern Kunar province were bombed by 50 Soviet MiG jets and 2,000 tanks in the last four days.

In all, they said six villages were destroyed, and the rebels also said they had information that the Soviets used napalm in the attacks.

In New Delhi, Indian intelligence sources said Soviets troops are training thousands of Baluchi tribesmen in Afghanistan for a spring offensive that could give Moscow direct access to the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

Western intelligence analysts believe Baluchistan — which covers sections of Afghanistan, Pakistan and Iran — may be a major target for the Kremlin in its historic search for a warm water port.

Indian intelligence sources said Soviet army officers have trained 3,000 to 4,000 tough Baluchi tribesmen in the southeastern Afghan province of Kandahar, which borders Pakistan's volatile Baluchistan province, along the strategic coasts of the Arabian Sea and the Gulf of Oman.

W. Germans borrowing from Saudis

BONN (AP) — The West German government is borrowing billions of marks from oil-rich Saudi Arabia to offset effects of a deficit in the current balance of payments, a government official said today.

Confirming earlier reports, spokesman Armin Gruenewald told reporters the government plans to borrow "under 10 billion marks." Ten billion marks is equivalent to about $5.4 billion.

Sources later reported the amount would be six billion marks.

In buying marks with other currencies and then using the marks to buy West German government notes, the Saudis will help offset an outflow of capital from West Germany represented by a 1979 current account deficit of $4.8 billion.

Waldheim warns United States against military action in Iran

Times News Services

UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim cautioned the United States against military action in Iran as freedom for the U.S. hostages in Tehran looked further and further away.

"If you think you can solve this problem by force you are wrong," because that would jeopardize the lives of the 53 captives and "create an explosion" in the entire Middle East, Waldheim told a news conference Thursday.

Waldheim, in Washington for a meeting with State Secretary Cyrus Vance, was concerned about a call by Senate Republicans for the Carter administration to consider a naval blockade and mining of Iran's ports.

Waldheim praised President Carter's "restraint and firmness." He said he was confident patience and perseverance will lead to the release of the 50 hostages who began their 139th day in captivity in the U.S. embassy today and the three U.S. diplomats who are also prisoners.

Waldheim said he is hopeful a UN investigating commission will be allowed to return to Iran after the new parliament is elected. And he said he has received indications recently that the crisis will end regardless of who wins the election.

He did not say what the indications were.

Ayatollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolutionary regime, has said the 270 members of the new Majlis, the Iranian parliament, will decide whether to free the hostages, and Ayatollah Mohammed Beheshti, first secretary of the Revolutionary Council, has said the Majlis won't discuss the issue until mid-May. But further delays in that schedule now appear in prospect.

A slow count of the votes in the first round of the parliamentary elections last Friday and allegations of vote frauds by Beheshti's hard-line Islamic Republican party are delaying the certification of those elected and those who must go into runoff elections. Election officials in Tehran said it is virtually certain that the runoff planned for April 4 will be put off until April 11 or later. This would delay the organization of the Majlis and its taking up the hostage issue.

Khomeini in a broadcast on the occasion of the Persian new year said continued complaining about election fraud is anti-Islamic.

"This is a wrong thing to say," the Shiite Moslem patriarch said. "Don't keep repeating it."

In a related development, an armed guard is reported to have been placed in front of the Canadian High Commission in Colombo by the Sri Lanka government at Canada's request.

An informed source said the move was aimed at preventing a possible reprisal against Canada's initiative in helping six U.S. diplomats escape from Iran in January.

Meanwhile, Khomeini said today the Communist world is no less a threat to Iran than the United States

Khomeini said Iran should "try hard to export our revolution to the world" because Islam "is the supporter of all the oppressed people of the world,".

Referendum wording finally hammered out

QUEBEC (CP) — Sixty-seven Parti Quebecois members and one Independent flashed one big smile.

After a 35-hour televised exchange of high and low blows, the national assembly had just adopted the definitive referendum question by a vote of 68-37 early Thursday night.

Government House leader Claude Charron capped it off with a nod to the real world outside, saluting the coming of spring which, in the thick of their intense constitutional wrangling, members had missed.

Government members were flushed with an easy victory but the Liberals remained straightfaced, convinced to the end that the outnumbered federalist assembly members should have been given equal speaking time with the more numerous PQ.

The Speaker's ruling gave the federalists 14 hours to the PQ side's 21.

Name calling accompanied papal and biblical quotations, historical references and economic arguments in the debate that was supposed to focus on the wording of the question but that ended up being a battle over the relative merits of sovereignty-association and federalism.

Premier Rene Levesque described the debate as "dignified." Liberal Leader Claude Ryan termed it an "exercise in propaganda."

What came out of it all was pretty well what went in. After all the sound and fury, the referendum question remained identical to the text tabled by Levesque last Dec. 20, save for minor semantic changes to the third paragraph.

When they go to the polls at some yet-to-be-announced date this spring, Quebecers will have to say yes or no to this:

"The government of Quebec has made public its proposal to negotiate a new agreement with the rest of Canada, based on the equality of nations;

"This agreement would enable Quebec to acquire the exclusive power to make laws, levy taxes and establish relations abroad — in other words, sovereignty — and at the same time to maintain with Canada an economic association including a common currency;

"No change in political status resulting from these negotiations will be effected without approval by the people through another referendum;

"On these terms, do you give the government of Quebec the mandate to negotiate the proposed agreement between Quebec and Canada?"

The word changes in the third paragraph were suggested by Rodrigue Biron, who was leader of the Union Nationale party until March 3, the day before the start of the debate.

Biron switched to the yes side in the referendum, leaving his five former colleagues in the federalist camp.

The 30 Liberal members plus the five Union Nationale members and three Independents hammered away at the question as unclear, partisan and dishonest.

For one thing, the question does not call for a clear yes or no to sovereignty-association, they said.

On top of that, the PQ is presenting the question as non-partisan and urging even federalists to vote yes as the only way to open the door to serious constitutional bargaining. That strategy seems to be meeting with some success.

Over and over, Ryan and other federalists repeated that no federalist can be logical and vote yes to a question that will lead to severing the federal link.

Levesque and his colleagues retorted that no Quebecer in favor of the equality of the French and English nations in Canada can afford to vote no.

That equality is possible only through sovereignty-association, they said. It's impossible in the federal context

PQ members blamed federalism for all the sins in creation, Ryan said.

Captain Canada a hero in U.S.?

CALGARY (UPC) — Will American comic book readers be prepared to accept a foreign superhero from Canada?

After the groundswell of goodwill toward Canada following ambassador Kenneth Taylor's role in spiriting six U.S. diplomats out of Iran, comic book writer Richard Comely believes they will.

The 29-year-old creator of Canada's own comic superhero will find out for sure next month when 100,000 copies of Captain Canada hit American newsstands, distributed by Capitol Distributing of Derby, Conn.

"I think Americans feel differently about Canada" since Taylor and his staff helped six American diplomats to escape from Iran earlier this year, Comely said Thursday.

"They were very emotional about the whole thing and I think they feel good now about Canada. That's one reason I think it will do well down there now."

Before Taylor's feat of very real derring-do, Comely said, he was concerned that Americans might consider it unpatriotic to buy and read a comic book based on a foreign superhero.

Published in Canada for the last year by CKR Productions of Calgary, the 36-page comic book features Captain Canuck, the number one agent of a fictitious Canadian security agency and is set sometime in the 1990s.

The hero, Comely explained, underwent a doubling of his strength and speed after a mysterious encounter with alien beings from another planet.

The Canadian International Security Organization, a product of Comely's imagination, gave Captain Canuck a job and a superhero costume so that he would "strike fear into the hearts of terrorists and foreign agents," the author explained.

Comely said he is not sure how big a role the Taylor escapade had in Capitol Distributing's decision to pick up the comic book, but "I'm sure to a certain degree it had some influence on their decision."

Philip Anglim, who has won acclaim for his performance in the title role of The Elephant Man, appeared before a U.S. Senate Appropriations subcommittee in an appeal for research funds that might lead to a cure for disorders such as that afflicting the character he portrays in the Bernard Pomerance play. Anglim recently left the Broadway production to play the role of John Merrick in the road tour of the show. In the play, Merrick, a 19th-century Englishman, suffers from a rare genetic disease, neurofibromatosis. The disease caused tumors over much of his body and left him badly deformed. Anglim spoke of the hundreds of deformed people he has met since originating the role. "They are trapped inside bodies that don't work and aren't beautiful," he said.

The U.S. Olympic Hockey team tore up the ice when they played the Russians. Now four of the gold medalist pucksters are out to do the same with the record charts. In a complicated deal pulled together by Berlin-Carmen International Aritsts of New York, Mark Wells, Phil Verchota, Buzz Schneider and Steve Janaszak got together to lay down a track for America, America — written and rendered on lead vocal by Norman Schilt. The commemorative record — in red, white and blue vinyl — will come out later this year under a label yet to be announced.

The wisecracks flew hot and heavy — even when Bob Hope wasn't on stage. The 76-year-old master of the one-liner was in Phoenix, Ariz., to perform for the National Conference of Christians and Jews when he was asked if he'd entertain troops in a future war. The answer: "I hope it's not in Afghanistan. I've never done a monologue from a camel."

Millie Jackson made her reputation in Brooklyn — but she's not sure it's one the New York City borough wants to note. The soul singer, whose shows and gold albums contain some off-color banter, was stunned when Borough president Howard Golden called to announce Millie Jackson Day in the community where she first gained fame. "They said the borough president would be at the ceremony," said Jackson, who will perform that night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. "They said it was to set an example about Brooklyn. "And I said, 'Are you sure it's me you want? I'm the example you want?'

Dear Abby:

You would do a lot of elderly single men a favor if you would tell them to change their line when they go courting. This is the message: Most older ladies hate to cook!

So, Abby, tell the older gentlemen that the quickest way to turn a woman off is to say, "Gee, I sure would enjoy a good home-cooked meal."

But if they want to turn a woman on they should say, "I miss having company at mealtime. What time shall I call for you?"

Matchmaker

Dear Match:

Inviting a lady out to dine is better for openers than hinting for a home-cooked meal. But feeding a man is a time-honored expression of love.

Dear Abby:

I am a former ugly duckling. For the past few years I have been on a staunch self-improvement campaign. This includes diet, exercise, and instructions on skin care, makeup and hairstyles. I am 30, married, and considered attractive by most people.

A few times, my husband has given me the following compliment: "Even though you are far from beautiful, you are kind, smart and a good housekeeper."

I realize that I am overly sensitive, but I take this compliment as an insult. During a heated argument over this often-repeated "compliment" my husband insisted that in a marriage one must be totally honest about one's feelings, even if the other is hurt.

I maintain that his comments were unnecessary, and damaging to my ego, and he should have kept them to himself.

Who is right?

Connie

Dear Connie:

You are. Your husband's "total honesty" strikes me as being needless cruelty.

Dear Abby:

My husband and I were invited to my cousin's home for a gathering of friends and relatives. (About 20 people.) Food and drinks were served.

As we were leaving, we thanked our hostess most sincerely for the enjoyable evening.

About a week later, I ran into this cousin, who told me that I was the only person at her party who didn't call her to thank her again. I felt like a heel.

Abby, is this second thanks necessary? I thought thanking her when we left was sufficient.

Perplexed

Dear Perplexed:

A written "thank you" indicates the ultimate in graciousness. A phone call is next. Neither is mandatory — but both show good manners.

However, pointing out your failure shows your cousin to be more lacking in manners than you.

Confidence carves a career

By LON WOOD

The true lifestyle of Northwest Coast Indians may have been virtually eliminated in the 19th Century but current economics have at least indirectly kept native artists off the endangered species list, says Haida carver Doug Wilson.

"As kids we'd go to Rupert to fish — that was a big trip. We were treated — and acted — like second class citizens.

"Now, a lot of us are very wealthy through fishing and logging and what have you — and with wealth comes a lot of confidence.

"My younger brother and his crowd now take a jet to a rock concert in Vancouver just for the weekend — maybe two or three times a year.

"Before we felt 'I guess they're right in doing what they're doing, so I guess we belong down here'. Now we say this is wrong. We belong where we belong, and confidence has its part in keeping it so."

Wilson lives in Victoria. He is one of only a handful of carvers who work solely with argillite — a compact argilaceous rock peculiar to the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The 37-year-old artist is from Skidegate. When he first sought buyers for his argillite pieces, he needed lots of confidence.

"It was a great hassle — going place to place to place; get rejected here, there and everywhere else. It was really depressing. It usually took two or three days to get over it. I'd think 'Oh, God! Maybe I'm in the wrong business'."

Gradually, recognition came for the style he evolved through the influences of his grandfathers Henry Young and Jimmy Jones, as well as Charlottes carvers such as Claude Davidson, Pat Dixon and Pat McGuire.

"Perhaps the teacher who has had the biggest part in my progress is Ron Hamilton — the West Coast artist," said Wilson.

He also learned to weed out the high-turnover outlets who would jam his carvings between "Indian" beadwork from Japan and black velvets of children not native to any B.C. community.

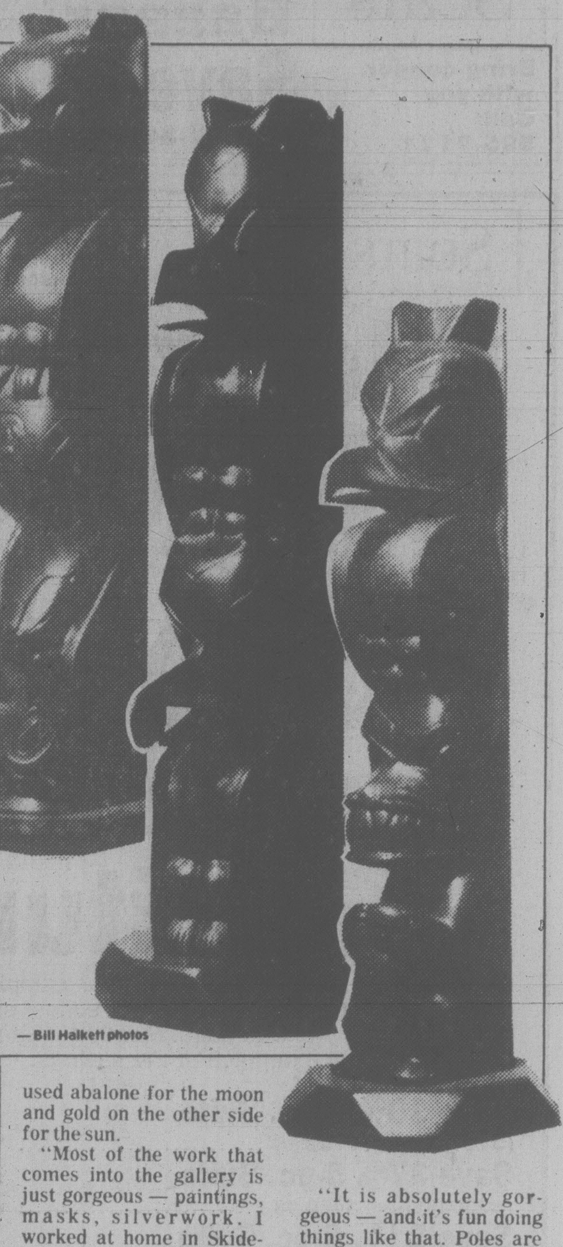
"I am known well enough now that I don't deal with too many people. Fortunately I can pick and choose.

"I set my own price and just say 'This is what I want out of it . . .'"

The money he receives for his pieces never compensates fully for the creative effort.

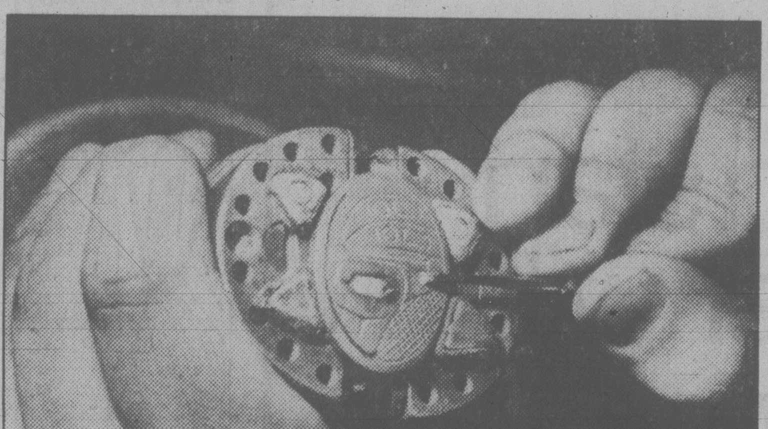
"Everytime you carve something nice, a whole lot of you goes into it. It is really hard letting it go — but it helps if you know it is shown in a good place by someone with integrity on a personal level as well as in business."

Wilson has found the compromise of business and personal factors at the Art Mosaic gallery in Harbour Square. The gallery has provided him with studio space and an atmosphere which he thrives on.



— Bill Halkett photos

DOUG WILSON, shown above in his Government Street studio, seldom takes a holiday from his art. "Holidays? I've tried them, but you get the feeling something is missing if you don't carve a bit every day." Below he inlays an argillite brooch with pure gold. Above right, three of his totems, each of which is about eight inches tall.



"Most of the work that comes into the gallery is just gorgeous — paintings, masks, silverwork. I worked at home in Skidegate for a lot of years but you don't get too much accomplished. You're by yourself and you drink your tea and you get up and look out the window and wish somebody would drop by and visit.

"Anyway, you could make a living at home in argillite — not a very comfortable living though. The gold and silver carvers are the ones who do best up there. They can't keep up with their orders. For argillite carvers, here's the place to be — or Vancouver."

The nature of argillite is one reason fewer take to it over the precious metals, he said.

"It is just so dammn dirty — continuous dirt. Not dirt, but black. But I enjoy it because there isn't anything else I could compare with the feel of argillite. If you can master it, it's just so nice to work in.

"I get tired of the dirt every once in a while and just leave it alone — then get back to it again."

Every argillite carver has his own approach, says Wilson — and there are variations within each individual style.

"Right now I'm inlaying pure gold into the argillite — usually on the beaks and eyes. It looks fantastic. I won't say nobody has ever tried it but nobody has carried it through."

In one carving depicting sun and moon, Wilson has used abalone for the moon and gold on the other side for the sun.

"It is absolutely gorgeous — and it's fun doing things like that. Poles are sort of my main thing. I enjoy doing them but I'm at a point where I just don't want to start another one without trying something different and then going back to my old standby."

Wilson has begun work on a retrospective of his 10-year carving experience. It will be held this fall in Art Mosaic in conjunction with a major book he has co-authored on the past and present history of argillite carvers and their works.

"I'm going to try for half a dozen major new pieces for the show as well — and I've just contacted the person who has the first pole I ever did, to borrow it for the show.

The book, he said, spans over 200 years and debunks the common notion that argillite began after European contact.

"We've tried to pick out an example of each carver from about 1910 to date and expand on each and their history. We are now choosng from about 320 excellent photos from museums all over the world."

Who buys argillite?

"Just about anybody. At one time it was just the rich. Now, it's young couples who've heard so much about the Charlottes. Or they've been there and they buy items that are a part of it. They save to buy a piece — maybe the only one they'll buy in their life. It's something special."

Attitude eases hurt of hysterectomy

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Within the next six months I will undergo a hysterectomy operation. I'm far more worried about how this will affect me as a woman than I am about the operation itself. This aspect of the operation has never come up in discussions with my doctor.

Mrs. G.R.Y.

Dear Mrs. Y.:

I must ask you if you deliberately avoided discussing this problem with your surgeon. If you had discussed it, I am sure that your anxiety would have been alleviated at once. Most doctors today are psychologically oriented and have a deep awareness of the emotional problems surrounding all aspects of surgery.

Dr. Marc H. Hollender, professor of psychiatry at Vanderbilt University, made a very astute statement about your problem when he said, "The removal of the uterus (womb) is experienced as a profound assault on a woman's feelings of femininity."

It is for this reason that all aspects of the surgery and the psychological overtones of hysterectomy must be completely understood. Only in this way will you be relieved of the myths and ignorance that have surrounded this operation.

Normal, well-adjusted women who have expressed this anxiety and have had it relieved by their surgeons need not react adversely to this operation. Far too many women falsely believe that their sexual responses and their physical attractiveness will be altered after surgery. This is not true. In fact, many women seem to be relieved because they are freed of the "nuisance" of menstruation and the possibility of unwanted pregnancy.

Unless women are psychologically prepared for hysterectomy, they can be overwhelmed by a sense of depression which they do not deserve. This psychological preparation must be considered equally with the surgery.

Surgeons are aware that with psychological understanding the post-operative physical and emotional period of convalescence can be diminished in severity and duration.

Try talking to your surgeon.

Dear Doctor:

Our 4-year-old son is in good health. An X-ray of his chest showed that he has an extra rib. The doctor said it's unimportant, but I wonder if it will cause trouble when he grows older.

Mrs. L.U.

Dear Mrs. U.:

The extra rib rarely causes any symptoms. In fact, many people go through their lives without any awareness that it exists. It is during a routine X-ray that the extra, or "cervical," rib is found.

UVic actors mark year-end

The close of the 1979-80 academic year for the University of Victoria theatre department will be marked by a free series of student lecture-demonstrations and performances over a period of 10 days.

The series will begin Saturday in the Phoenix Theatre, 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. This event will consist of a lecture-demonstration of the Etienne Decroux Philosophy of corporal mime expression. It will be conducted by J.R. Bentley, a former student of Decroux.

The workshop will involve an improvisational demonstration, followed by a talk explaining the techniques used. A question-and-answer period will conclude the two-hour session. Famous Decroux students were Jean Louis Barreault, Charlie Chaplin and Marcel Marceau.

The next part of the series will take place in the L-Hut Studio Monday through Friday at 12:30 p.m.

Under the title, Lady Shall I Lie in Your Lap, there will be performances of a collection of scenes from the plays of Shakespeare, among them, Rosalind's courtship of Orlando (As You Like It), Petruchio and Katherine (Taming of the Shrew), the wooing of Lady Anne (Richard III), Hamlet's "Get thee to a nunnery" scene; several scenes from Macbeth, and the "merry war" between Beatrice and Benedict (Much Ado About Nothing).

Third event returns the series to the Phoenix with a production of Thornton Wilder's Our Town.

This is a presentation by the Theatre 220 acting specialization students under the direction of Carl Hare with mime sequences by Kaz Piesowocki. It takes place at 8 nightly Tuesday through Friday, each evening offering a different performance as the students play a variety of roles on each occasion.

Concluding this free series, there will be a demonstration of Commmedia dell'Arte.

This style of improvised Italian comedy was performed by wandering troupes of professional actors in the 16th to 18th centuries. It involves improvisation and masks. Music, dancing, acrobatics and buffoonery are all part of it.

Presented by third- and fourth-year acting students, Commedia dell'Arte will be offered Monday, March 31, through Wednesday, April 2, in the L-Hut Studio at 12:30 p.m.

For further information the number to call is 477-6911, local 4410.

Shmuzzle up!

CHICAGO (AP) — For the jigsaw puzzle worker in need of a challenge, there is the Shmuzzle, a picture puzzle with 168 interlocking pieces — all shaped the same.

The puzzle was designed by Sam Savage, a 35-year-old professor of applied mathematics and computer science at the University of Chicago.

He says the puzzle comes in four designs and resembles an ordinary jigsaw puzzle, except that each piece is identical in shape, reminiscent of the mosaic art form known as tessellation.

The puzzle comes in picture designs of ears of corn, a woman's mouth titled The Kiss, an autumn scene and a can of worms.

Patterns on the reverse side represent the bonus — the shmuzzling, says Savage. All sorts of design doodling are possible, from mushrooms to snowflakes to no pattern at all.

The puzzles cost about $10 each.

volunteering

More and more people are discovering the satisfaction to be found in volunteering. Unfortunately many of those living outside Victoria find it impossible, because of time or transportation limitations, to get into the city to volunteer. If you have the time to share these problems need not restrict you.

For residents of the Saanich peninsula there are ample opportunities for rewarding pleasurable activities which help others. Sidney organizations have a growing need for volunteers in a variety of tasks, as do agencies in other parts of the peninsula. There is a great need for volunteers to work with seniors, teens and children, with the mentally and physically handicapped, in duties from office reception, to recreation leadership, to gardening. There is something for everyone. Today's column gives a brief outline of a few of the possibilities in this area.

A youth club in central Saanich is looking for men and women to assist with physical recreation programmes for boys and girls. People knowledgeable about sailing and fishing are especially needed, but those interested in other sports are welcome too. Volunteers must be over 18 years old and interested in children.

A residence for mentally handicapped young adults is in need of helpers for shopping trips to Victoria on Friday nights. This could involve driving the residents to shopping centres, acting as companions for shopping, or both. Volunteers need not have their own transportation but could help on a personal basis.

A volunteer service in Sidney has a need for volunteer helpers in thier community office. Duties would include reception, record-keeping, phoning, or typing.

A special recreation program for the region has a variety of needs for volunteers. They are eager to find activity assistants to participate in recreational games, walking, discussions, as well as other week-day activities. This type of work requires the ability to work and socialize with the handicapped and a willingness to learn.

An intermediate care facility is trying to institute a ceramics programme. They require at least two assistants who have basic knowledge of ceramic techniques and empathy and patience with elderly people. Time involved would be approximately one hour per week and orientation is given.

An area recreation organization needs babysitters. Those persons with skills in leadership and crafts and experience with pre schoolers are especially wanted. This is also a good opportunity for students to volunteer and gain experience with youngsters.

An organization for recreation for the handicapped would like to find a male volunteer willing to help a small group of mentally-handicapped children in a swim class. This would involve all aspects of helping boys in the changing room and the pool. The class takes place on Saturdays.

A residential facility for the mentally and physically handicapped has a special request for a family or a couple of people who can transport a Roman Catholic lady to Mass on Sundays. She is very cheerful and able to talk, but is confined to a wheelchair. Volunteers must be capable of picking her up, taking her to church, and returning her to the residence once a week.

At the same facility, there is always a significant need for people to volunteer on a one to one basis helping residents with social activities, crafts, basic skills, swimming, etc. Because of the nature of the work, a commitment of at least six months is necessary. Times and duties can be arranged.

These are only a few of the many opportunities available to those who would like to volunteer in the Saanich region.

In Victoria there is an urgent need for drivers to take blind persons to activities or medical appointments and to bring them home. Times and details can be worked out. Also needed are people to undertake clerical work in the CNIB volunteer office. Qualified people who would like to make a long-term commitment to one or one-half day per week are invited to call the Victoria Volunteer Bureau at 386-2269.

Information on many volunteer jobs is available at the Victoria Volunteer Bureau, in all areas of the Greater Victoria region. The Bureau welcomes enquiries about the jobs listed above and other volunteer opportunities listedby Victoria organizations. The office is open Monday to Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Laurie's keeping a stiff upper lip

By JOHN GOUDAS

For three months on The Young and the Restless, Laurie Prentiss has been crying her eyes out over the breakup of her marriage. With husband Lance finally out of the house, Laurie should run dry this spring.

As Laurie, perhaps the most popular character in the soap, Jaime Lyn Bauer couldn't be blamed if she did a little wailing on her own. Ever since The Young and the Restless went to an hour in early February, Jaime has been putting in 11- and 12-hour working days at CBS. Jaime, however, isn't crying nor pointing the finger at producer John Conboy or creator-writer Bill Bell, both of whom are doubling their own work loads.

"John and Bill are being very considerate," says Jaime. "They're trying to make the best of a difficult situation. Nobody wants to work 12 hours a day without letup. If I pity myself, think of the crew that now works two stages, moving from one to the other to block and shoot the show. I don't know how they do it."

Expanding front-running The Young and the Restless to an hour is a network idea, one pushed for years, but always rejected by the original cast. As newcomers joined the show, resistance evaporated. Voila, the hour length.

Ironically, the move to an hour has toppled the show from the high position in the ratings, dropping it several notches. Network affiliates have shifted the show around, losing viewers for the present. At least, that's the reasoning given for the drop.

Jaime, a seven-year-veteran on the show, isn't taking the change crying down. She will continue to shed tears as Laurie Prentiss as long as The Young and the Restless storyline calls for them; meantime she is doing what she can to better the lot of overworked soap opera performers.

Channel Chatter: Curt Dawson, who portrays good-natured Dr. Peter Chapman on Guiding Light, is also appearing in a Chelsea Theater Centre production in New York City entitled Dona Rosita, While She Waits . . .

Sammy Davis Jr. will once again appear on One Life to Live in the role of ex-convict Chip Warren. These segments will air in mid-April.

Richard Muenz (Joe Novak on Ryan's Hope, who scored good personal notices for his singing role in the recent PBS special The Most Happy Fella, has the inside track for the coveted role of Lancelot in the Richard Burton Broadway-bound revival of Camelot. Handsome Richard will be following in the footsteps of the original Lancelot, played by Robert Goulet.

Paneless Zephyr could hurt your pocketbook

by mike lamm

Dear Mike: About a nonth after our 1979 Merury Zephyr went off waranty, the passenger-side vindow fell down inside the loor. My wife was rolling lown the glass, and it just lisappeared with a clunk. he window handle turns ut has no effect. I've temorarily taped a sheet of ardboard over the winlow. Can you tell me what aused the window to fall nside the door this way, vhether it's hard to repair, and how much it ought to cost? — In Pane

Dear In: There's a Teflon bracket that's reveted to the bottom of the glass. This bracket probably broke and needs to be replaced. the bracket itself costs around $7, and it's a one-hour job, which means the total tab should come to less than $50. That's assuming the glass isn't broken.

Dear Mike: One year ago, I had a remanufactured 327-inch V-8 installed in my 1966 Chevelle. This engine now has only 4000 miles on it. My problem is that the exhaust spews out a lot of blue smoke — almost as much as the old engine did. A mechanic told me this might be because I've always used detergent oil — that I should have run a non-detergent oil for break-in. Is this so? What else could cause this smoke? — Smokey

Dear Smokey: I don't believe the detergent oil is at fault. Did the mechanic install a so-called "short block"? If so, he used your old heads, pan, and accessories. Did he do a valve job before he put on your heads? If he didn't do the valve job, and if your valve guides were worn, that could be the problem. Also, the definition of "remanufactured" varies from shop to shop; anything remanufactured is only as good as the remanufacturer's reputation.

Dear Mike: Any suggestion for curing the seemingly endless electrical problems that plague my 1965 Lincoln Continental convertible? The top mechanism, power seats, windows, trunk release, etc., perpetually break down. I've had this car to the dealer 20-30 times, only to end up with a fleeting "cure." Is there a fundamental problem that makes this car's electrical system unfixable? — Olympia Doc

Dear Doc: All 1961-67 Continental convertibles are notorious for weak electrical systems. Great cars, yes, but like camels and Amtrak, you can't count on them for everyday transportation. You'll find encouragement and advice in the Milestone Car Society, Box 50850, Indianapolis, Ind. 46250. The MCS expert on Continental convertibles is Charles Kelly, 29121 Village Rd., Southfield, Mich. 48076.

Muppets star Miss Piggy gets her coiffure in sunny Mexico

Here's where Miss Piggy gets her looks

By SUSAN STOLER

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Miss Piggy gets her hair done here nearly every day.

Her paramour, Kermit the Frog, has his eyes examined at the same time.

Meanwhile, Rowlf, Animal, Scooter and Fozzie Bear are being groomed and fitted for clothes.

No, the Muppets haven't deserted their successful television show and movie for early retirement in Mexico.

While the real stars are still working in show business, millions of toys in their images leave a Fisher-Price Toy Co. factory here every year.

This is the only plant in the world making the whimsical characters.

Fred Quintana, plant manager, estimates his 1,100 workers sewed, stuffed and coiffed 2.5 million Muppets last year.

"I think we're all kids," says Quintana, an American citizen who also manages a Fisher-Price plant in Brownsville, Tex., across the Rio Grande.

Under a trade agreement with Mexico, U.S. companies are encouraged to locate plants here and import raw materials duty-free.

Fisher-Price has manufacturered Muppet toys, which retail from $9 to $13, since 1976 in a licensing agreement with the characters' creator, Jim Henson.

"The Muppets are doing real well. Miss Piggy was the number one toy in the nation last year. Kermit is in his third year of production and he was upstaged by Miss Piggy," Quintana said.

Toys are assembled by hand in two large buildings. At one sewing machine, a woman is fastening Kermit's head while across the aisle a co-worker finishes a seam on his leg.

He gradually takes shape, while across the room Miss Piggy's slinky lavender dress is sewn.

Her long platinum locks are curled and brushed in the other building. A hair-planting machine sews on rows of curls and a line of workers brush them out, attach a hair net and send the doll to the packing lane.

Leboyer method mostly myth?

By JANE E. BRODY
New York Times

NEW YORK — A Canalian study has found no special advantage to mothr or baby in the increasngly popular but controversial Leboyer method of 'nonviolent'' childbirth when compared with more conventional methods that also stress a "gentle" aproach to birth.

At the same time, however, the study found no particular risks associated with the Leboyer technique, in which the baby is born in a dimly lighted [illegible]room and is imnediately placed "skin to skin" on its mother's abdonen, where both parents can massage and stroke its back. The cutting of the umbilical cord is usually delayed for about 10 minutes, and the father hen gives the baby a bath.

The study, reported in he current issue of The New England Journal of Medicine, drew upon 54 births supervised by Dr. Nancy Nelson and her forner colleagues at McMaser University Medical Center in Hamilton, Onario. Obstetricians at McMaster are still doing Leboyer-type deliveries for women who want them.

Dr. D.C. Nelson, a researcher in developmental pediatrics now at Dalhousie University in Halifax, emphasized in an interview that the study's findings "should not be taken to mean there is no need to change how babies are delivered, that you don't have to be more gentle."

The Leboyer method was developed by a French obstetrician, Dr. Frederick Leboyer, who described it in a best-selling book, Birth Without Violence, published in 1975. It was intended to make childbirth a less traumatic experience for the baby by delivering it into an environment that more closely resembles the dark, quiet, wet surroundings of the womb.

Many obstetricians have resisted the method, citing potential risks in the use of a darkened room and the delay in cutting the umbilical cord. But increasing numbers of prospective parents have asked to have a Leboyer-type delivery, and some doctors have acquiesced. For example, Drs. David Kliot and Max Lilling, obstetricians at Brookdale Hospital Center and Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn, though at first skeptical of Leboyer's contentions, have delivered more than 1,500 babies using a modified form of his methods.

In a controlled study of 100 births, not yet published, the Brooklyn doctors found the Leboyer method to be a safe and satisfying experience that fosters a strong emotional bond between parents and child.

In the newly published study, the Leboyer births and the more conventional deliveries shared many factors. All were "family-centered" deliveries in which the parents had taken a "natural childbirth" course and the father was present during labor and delivery.

In both groups, only a minimal amount of pain-relieving drugs was used during labor and delivery, weighing of the infants and other medical procedures were delayed until an hour after birth, and attention was paid to "gentle" handling — no holding the children by the feet and slapping them on the back.

The Leboyer mothers had a shorter first stage of labor, the main statistically significant difference found among the various factors studied. Leboyer mothers also were more likely to think that the birth experience had influenced their baby's behavior.

However, minute-by-minute observations of the babies' behavior right after birth showed no significant differences, though there was a trend toward higher scores in responsiveness and physical coordination in the Leboyer babies. At eight months, tests of physical and mental development showed no difference between the two groups of infants.

"Unfortunately, we did not include fathers in our study," Dr. Nelson said.

'Protective' gov't tariffs don't protect consumers

joan watson
for consumers

Every now and then there are changes in federal or provincial legislation, or court rulings, that make consumers cheer. Less often these days, but still around, are setbacks.

Sometimes it feels as if we consumers are on a seesaw. Just when we feel we're getting somewhere, something comes along to bring us down to earth. At times, it seems we must continue to be watchful for as long as there is a marketplace.

And judging by history, that's all too true. Consumers have been facing ripoffs as long as society has existed.

Sure, we're more civilized now. And government legislation has given us some protection. But "the government" is not always putting consumer interests first.

Take the example of floundering industry. Whenever a Canadian industry gets in trouble, such as our shoe industry did recently, they blame "cheap imports" as the culprit. If an investigation shows the industry would do better if imports cost more, the federal government has the power to limit the number and value of imports, and to levy a duty on the products to help raise the price to the consumer.

In theory, this practice makes the Canadian product more competitive.

In the case of the shoe industry, it meant more expensive shoes for everybody.

Lots of other products are subject to these 'restrictive tariffs' as well.

And recently, some clothing manufacturers and stereo console manufacturers have asked the government to take further action against imports in those industries.

Now, the point of that kind of action is to help the industry in times of trouble. But it's the consumer who pays. Cheap imports disappear, and the price of everything, imported and domectic, often goes up.

But just to keep it all in perspective, consider Seventeenth Century England under Charles II. When the woolen industry there wasn't doing too well, a law was passed to help them out. It declared that everyone who died had to be buried in woollens.

Now, there may have been other things that would have helped that industry — and consumers, too — but that was the solution they chose. In the end, the consumer paid.

Of course, the British woolen industry has done pretty well, and we can't be sure about the Canadian shoe industry.

Other consumer issues have been around for centuries, too. Take adulteration of food products, for example. My mailbag often contains letters from consumers who got more than they bargained for in that way. Foreign particles in food products as diverse as milk and vinegar, raisins and pickles.

In Victorian England, a Select Committee inquired into problems much worse tha these in 1854. They found that almost every type of product that could be adulterated, was.

Water was added to butter Coffee might have had rye or potato flour — or even acorns. And bread often contained mashed potatoes or alum — even plaster of paris, to make it hold more water and thus weight more. Of course, standards of sanitation were almost non-existent at that time. So bread was quite likely to contain cobwebs and other particles of filth.

The current debate over additives in food was even more appropriate then. They were already adding artificial colors and flavors. Many of them were known poisons!

So whenever you think fondly of bread from the good old fashioned days, think twice. Turning back the clock wouldn't help consumers.

And when you hear about butchers adding water to ground beef, remember that it isn't a new idea.

To top it off, it looks as if a dramatic change in political structure wouldn't make much difference, either. A recent news report from China was very revealing about the consumer problems encountered there.

It suggested that street peddlars in farmers' markets were tricking people. They sold poultry full of sand, dry coconuts injected with water, all to increase their weight. And leafy green vegetables were reported to have rotten leaves hidden under the fresh outer leaves.

The report added that street markets were a good idea, but that people "ought to be protected from such swindlers".

The point is simple. There has been a long standing need for consumer vigilance. And even with the legislative gains we've seen in this country, like the improved safety standards for consumer products, good sanitation laws, and so on, there remains the need for continuing watchfulness.

Failure to keep it up will undoubtedly mean that whenever there is a price to pay for increased profit, the consumer will pay it, one way or another.

Forced retirement unpopular notion

TORONTO (CP) — More Canadians than two years ago oppose forced retirement at 65, says a Gallup poll conducted last month.

The poll, based on 1,038 personal in-home interviews with adults over 18, asked if respondents thought mandatory retirement at 65, regardless of health, is a good idea.

In the study, 59 per cent thought forced retirement was a bad idea, an increase over the 52 per cent who felt that way in a 1977 poll.

Of those between 18 and 29, 65 per cent disliked forced retirement, compared with 59 per cent of those between 30 and 49, and 53 per cent of respondents over 50.

Keep-obstetrics-at-Jubilee doctors to fight on

The chairman of a committee of six doctors who are fighting the removal of general obstetric services from Royal Jubilee Hospital, said it will take its argument to the public — particularly pregnant women.

Dr. Scott Wallace said the proposal by Capital Regional District hospital planners to make the new Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road the site of the main obstetrics unit for the area is ill-advised.

"In fact, the move may result in poorer care for mother and child even though it's intended to do just the opposite," Wallace said.

The committee of six doctors, including John McCracken, Bob Young, George Rasmussen, Norm Rivers, Russell Grimwood, and John McCaw, was formed just two weeks ago.

Its members are ready and willing to speak to community groups amd interested individuals and to make information available in their waiting rooms on the subject.

The region's hospital board has turned down a recent appeal for the obstetrics units at Royal Jubilee and Saanich Peninsula hospitals to continue to operate as usual so Wallace said the question must now go to the public and, if necessary, to Health Minister Rafe Mair.

Wallace said time is a consideration in the practice of obstetrics — both the time it takes for a woman to get to the hospital and the time it takes for the doctor to arrive when he's needed.

Making the vast majority of mothers go to the hospital on Helmcken Road would go against that need.

"I'm not suggesting that every day someone would have a baby in a car on the highway but it isn't just a matter of doctors' convenience either. What I'm saying is that when things go wrong, the doctor is needed as quickly as possible."

Regional hospital planners argue that consolidating the obstetric unit at one hospital — although emergency cases would continue to be handled at any hospital — would improve the quality of care by making staff more familiar with any unusual situtations that can develop and making sophisticated equipment readily available.

"I think the argument could be made that the one or two mothers who would get slightly better care in a single obstetric unit have to be balanced against the others who would have to sacrifice some degree of care because of delays," Wallace said.

Last year 1,373 babies were born at RJH, 1,350 were born at VGH. Wallace himself delivered eight babies last year but he guessed the average general practicioner delivers about 15 a year.

Wallace says he doesn't object to the general principle the CRD proposes of allocating special units to each hospital but he does object to obstetics and pediatrics being considered in that.

He said obstetrics is not specialized medicine, it's a natural function that doesn't require the same kind of care and equipment that, for example, cardiac surgery requires.

He said he'd be willing to trade the cardiac surgery unit that's proposed for RJH to the new VGH in return for the right for RJH to continue to have its obstetric unit.

"You haven't got a community hospital unless you have all four basic areas of medicine: general medicine, general surgery, obstetrics and pediatrics," he said.

Blazing car takes off

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — It goes without saying that Brian Yorke was surprised when his car caught fire, then drove off by itself and crashed into the front of a neighbor's house.

Yorke, 19, had left his manual-transmission car parked in gear outside his house. About an hour later, his brother told him flames were coming out of it and he called the fire department.

As Yorke stood on his porch waiting for firemen to arrive, the car pulled away and travelled about 100 metres before crashing into the house, causing about $100 damage to it and about $2,200 to the car.

S.Sgt. Dan McDougall of the London police traffic division said he had never heard of such a thing but officials of a University of Western Ontario accident-research team told him it can happen.

It was believed the starter was activated when a wire shorted in the fire.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

309 IN MEMORIAM

DEVINE — IN memory of Charlie who passed away suddenly March 19, 1979.
Gone from us your smiling face,
Your happy carefree ways
The heart that won so many friends,
In happy by gone days.
The years may change many things,
But this they change never.
The memory of those happy days,
When we were all together.
Sadly missed by Ada, Alan, Holly and Bill Dee.

REYNARD - In loving memory of my dear mother Elizabeth who passed away March 21, 1974.
Gone from us your smiling face,
Your happy, carefree ways,
The heart that won so many friends,
In happy by-gone days,
The happy years we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still,
But death has left a vacant place,
This world can never fill.
Sadly missed by her daughter Marjorie Rogers and family.

REYNARD - In loving memory of a beloved wife, mother and Nana, Elizabeth, who passed away March 21st, 1974.
Remembrance is a golden chain
Death tries to break but all in vain;
To have, to love, and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never—
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.
Forever remembered, husband, daughters and grandchildren.

SMITH — In loving memory of a dear granddaughter and niece Lynnette Dawn, who was called away March 21, 1970.
Deep in our hearts
You are remembered
Happy memories cling round your name
Hearts that loved you with affection
Will always love you just the same.
—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by her grandmother, Uncles, Aunties and their families.

TREMEER — (nee Forster), Dianne M., March 31, 1975 and Rod Lodge, November 7, 1976.
Wonderful memories woven in gold.
These are the memories we tenderly hold.
—Mom, Johnnie, Glenn, Cynthia, Scott, and the children.

Musk melon-choly? Follow these steps

The musk melon (at one time known by some as cantaloup) can be grown here outdoors in spite of cool, late-spring nights. It needs more than general garden attention, even a little more than do tomatoes for early crops.

Musk melon is the small, fragrant fruit the size of a squatty coffee mug, with a netted outer covering and bright orange flesh inside. Half a fruit is considered a serving.

When growing successfully in the home garden, there is never a doubt as to when the fruits are at perfection for use. The perfume of their ripeness is on the air nearby, even of one fruit. This occurs usually on some late afternoon of a hot summer's day. You have been watching the fruit developing, wondering on what day it will be ready to eat; but the day the aroma can be noticed is the day to pick and use.

If you have never had a freshly-picked musk melon, you will be amazed at the flavor — light, yet rich.

To get this state of perfection, seeds need sowing indoors around April 10, which gives them six weeks before being put outdoors near end of May.

Even then, the melon plants will need protection day and night to maintain the warm soil and warm air so necessary for their quick growth. Individual shallow wood box frames covered with clear plastic raised on bent wire is one idea. The commercial plastic plant covers called Hotcaps is another.

Or if you have a few of the one-so-popular Chase glass cloches, placed end to end, you are well-equipped.

Melons, as well as cucumbers and squashes, do not tolerate root disturbance so must have continuous root activity from time of sprouting.

Sow three seeds in each small (milk) can, paper drinking cup, or two-inch plant pot. Use good garden loam, warmed to room temperature for several hours before sowing.

A miniature plastic greenhouse is ideal if you re-arrange the dividing strips making 8x8 cm compartments for three seeds in each.

These three seedlings will be reduced to the two strongest by cutting off one at soil level. Don't pull it out or other roots will be disturbed — just cut it off with sharp scissors.

During the growth period indoors, musk melons need the same attention to ventilation, light, and moisture requirements as has been outlined in a recent column for tomato plant raising. One exception is that melon plants should never be allowed to become dry, but neither should they be waterlogged at any time.

By sowing in the suggested containers, the melon plants' roots will never be disturbed because the container is removed from the intact rootball when the plants are to be put into their outdoor growing spaces.

One variety recommended for this area is Hale's Early. Look on seed packets of the variety you may find, it may give the number of days to maturity. Somewhere between 68 and 72 from setting them outdoors to first picking should bring success.

The number of fruits to a plant is considered to be four. Six plants to give two dozen musk melons loaded with fragrant juices and their high nutrition values seem well worth growing.

Wright tract 'not agricultural'

The Agricultural Land Commission removed property near North Saanich's Tsehum Harbor from the agricultural land reserve (ALR) because it didn't think the tract would ever be put to agricultural use.

The commission's senior planning assistant Everett Lew said Thursday the commission considered a report submitted by consultants hired by owner Bob Wright to assess the agricultural capabilities.

Based on the report, said Lew, the commission recognized the land has only limited agricultural capabilities, and in some areas only marginal capabilities.

The minutes of the hearing recorded that the commission removed the land from the ALR because it was on an isolated pocket of land, a peninsula, and the land surrounding it was not agricultural.

The commission stated there would be little effect on surrounding land by removing it, and that there was little chance it would ever be used agriculturally.

Wright describes the 30-acre site as being some of the most desirable waterfront property still undeveloped in the Victoria area.

North Saanich mayor Eric Sherwood said earlier council will appeal the commission's decision.

The formal appeal route requires that council obtain the signatures of two ALR commission members on an appeal request which would then be considered by the environmental land use committee of the provincial cabinet.

If council can't obtain the signatures, it can appeal to the minister of agriculture.

Lew said the seven-man commission indicated fairly strong support for Wright's proposal but he couldn't predict whether council could get two commission members to agree to an appeal.

Wright has said he intends to subdivide the property and sell individual lots.

The property has been the centre of controversy in North Saanich for more than two years.

Wright originally wanted to expand the marina already operating there and build some high-density housing units. In return, he offered a piece of the waterfront property to the municipality for park purposes.

Jack-in-box tactics have NDP jumping

The dying hours of a droning house debate were enlivened today by what unhappy NDP members call the old jack-in-the-box trick.

The opposition MLAs say it's just a sneaky, government ploy designed to make them look bad.

When an NDP member was slow getting to his feet, Finance Minister High Curtis took the floor to close off debate.

The result: pandemonium and anguished yells of outrage from the NDP.

Curtis told the house: "It is not my intent to force closure of the debate but it should be noted that at 10:45 of a Friday morning, the official opposition was asleep."

Premier Bill Bennett then asked how long Speaker Harvey Schroeder was prepared to wait for an opposition member to stand up.

A similar incident occurred Thursday night.

NDP house leader Frank Howard said Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe appeared to be getting up to speak but suddenly sat down, allowing Curtis to pop up.

"It's disgraceful," Howard said.

The NDP member scheduled to speak, Jim Lorimer (Burnaby-Willingdon) called the Socred move "an obvious ploy, a ridiculous ploy. They are trying to make some points because they haven't made any in this session."

Lorimer then took his place in the debate which is set to wind up on Monday.

After today's case, Curtis and New Westminster NDP MLA Dennis Cocke carried on a heated argumen outside the house.

Meanwhile, the government refuses to verify persistent rumors that it will cut out night sittings of the legislature starting next week.

Dropping the two night sittings per week would stretch out the session well into the summer.

It is seen as a government move to punish the opposition for refusing to agree to a pairing system which would allow government ministers greater freedom to travel.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Drowning victims may be saved by the same method that has helped save people who are choking on food, according to the inventor of the Heimlich Manoeuvre.

VGH directors back bimonthly abortion slate

Abortions will be performed every second month for the rest of the year at Victoria General Hospital if a motion passed Thursday by its board of management is followed through.

The board agreed in a six-to-three vote to allow the VGH therapeutic abortion committee to consider applications in March, May, July, September and November and to allow the abortion committee of Royal Jubilee Hospital to consider applications in the other five months.

This year's RJH committee has continued a practice of taking a liberal approach to the question of abortions while the VGH committee surprised its board by taking a hard line and refusing most applications.

Board member Robert Milne, a lawyer, proposed the motion after studying a written report from the board's solicitor.

He said the motion was designed to reflect the past practice of the hospital board which allowed the RJH committee to consider VGH abortion applications every second month while remaining within federal legislation which says a hospital may have a single abortion committee.

Several members of the board questioned the motion, suggesting it was an effort to uphold the board's philosophy on abortions rather than allowing the appointed committee to do its job.

"I question whether this motion is presented to continue the precedent of having two committees to ease the workload or whether, in fact, it's being done because there's opposition to the philosophical decisions of the committee," said board member Michael O'Connor, also a lawyer.

Federal legislation allows a hospital board, if it chooses, to appoint an abortion committee to consider individual applications for abortions.

Dr. Don Shorting, chief of VGH medical staff and a member of the hospital board, assessed the doctors' position in the controversy. He said the staff has indicated it is happy with the present abortion committee but, he said, it probably wouldn't object to the motion.

Municipalities also sweating over inflation

There's no simple solution to inflation and no immediate end in sight to soaring interest rates.

That was the double-barrelled message left Thursday with delegates to the annual meeting of the Municipal Finance Authority.

Newly re-elected MFA chairman, Ald. Jim Stuart of Kelowna, said local governments have to be made aware of the high cost of borrowing on the world's money markets.

Last year was volatile for agencies borrowing money, he said.

"As we enter 1980, the rates have increased again. Many economists are predicting reductions in the prime rate by as much as three or four per cent this year.

"Those same economists, however, predict little, if any, improvement in long-term rates," Stuart added.

The MFA was created 10 years ago to pool the borrowing power of B.C. municipalities and regional districts. It has obtained $598 million over the years in 25 forays into the money markets.

Stuart said the MFA has also just approved a new one totalling $63.5 million, half of it for public works projects on Vancouver Island.

Some $8.7 million is earmarked for the Capital Regional District and another $17.7 million is for five-year plans for Qualicum Beach, Parksville, Nanaimo city and regional district.

The authority plans to borrow the cash later this year, but faces uncertainty about what interest rate it will have to pay. Its last issue, $54.1 million in a sinking fund debenture, carried an interest rate of 12¼ per cent even with its AA rating in the New York bond market, the same as the province of B.C.

"We really sweated over that one, but it would look cheap today," said Stuart.

Bank of Montreal vice-chairman Stanley Davison of Vancouver told the delegates conservative, belt-tightening fiscal policies by governments are the only solution to inflation.

The quick remedy of wage and price controls just doesn't work, he said.

"Controls have been tried many times in the past but have never really worked.

"In fact, they can't work because they don't get at the causes for inflation which basically are governments spending too much, running up deficits and being aided and abetted by a go-along monetary policy."

He also said the economic recession which has been predicted for the U.S. for nearly a year now is going to show up soon, with serious consequences for B.C.'s lumber and mineral exports.

The MFA re-elected incumbent directors Jim Campbell, who is chairman of the CRD, Mayor Peter Lester of Prince Rupert and New Westminster Mayor Muni Evers.

Three new members were added to the seven-member board of trustees: Surrey Mayor Don Ross, 100 Mile House Mayor Ross Marks and Dan Cumming, chairman of the Squamish-Lillooet regional district.

Curb garbage pickup eyed

The city could save $300,000 a year if it switched to one-man curbside garbage pickup, city engineer John Sansom told council's public works committee Thursday.

He had been asked to examine ways of shaving costs in the sanitation department because Victoria faces a sharp increase in collection costs this year.

It's the result of a court decision last year which found that the city was discriminating against apartment owners by making them pay extra for garbage collection beyond the standard two cans per building.

Sansom said in a letter that considerable savings had already been made since Victoria's garbage collectors went to the "toter system" in 1976 — about $75,000 a year — on four of six domestic routes.

"The ultimate in cost saving is the one-man system," said Sansom.

"In this method, the householder is required to place his garbage cans at the curb on a pre-determined day each week. A truck specially designed for side loading is used and the driver is able to service all premises without help.

"He empties the cans into the side of the truck — the hopper is below waist level — and leaves them empty for the householder to return to his property.

"Such a system would save approximately $300,000 per year; however, there would be an initial cost of approximately $400,000 for the purchase of the new trucks . . ."

He said it would take two years to implement such a system and staff would be reduced through attrition or redeployment during this period.

The big saving with the one-man method is that labor costs are only about a third of the present system, Sansom said.

Drainage plan studied

Victoria's public works committee Thursday deferred to its budget debates next week a recommendation by city engineer John Sansom for storm drainage improvements costing $1.9 million in the Haultain Valley area.

It's the largest storm drain system in Victoria, covering about a quarter of the city. It drains into Rock Bay.

The catchment area is centred on low-lying Haultain and Bay streets, from Shelbourne west to the harbor.

It extends as far north as Finlayson and south to North Park street, although one finger goes almost up to Rockland.

The improvements would provide protection for the worst rainfall that could be expected in a 20-year period, Sansom said in a letter to council.

Existing drains provide protection for the worst rainfall that could be expected in a five-to-10-year period.

Sansom wants the project included in the 1980 budget so it could go to tender later this year.

United Way board elected

United Way of Greater Victoria members Thursday elected a new board of directors.

Ralston Alexander will serve as president, replacing outgoing president Scoop Roberts.

In 1979 for the first time ever the campaign collected more than $1 million and for the first time in several years, the United Way has enough of a surplus to replenish a dwindling reserve fund.

This year $1,072,636 was raised compared to last year's $928,633.

During the annual meeting — the organization's 42nd — 42 businesses and organizations were awarded gold plaques for having at least 75 per cent of employees contribute pledges averaging at least $25 per employee.

The United Way is incorporated under the Societies Act and its board of directors is chosen from its membership at an annual general meeting.

Anyone who donates $1 or more is eligible for membership in the society and can take part by attending the meeting.

Victim awarded $4,595

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver woman who was slashed with a knife wielded by her estranged husband was awarded $4,595 for loss of wages and injuries under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act, the Workers' Compensation Board announced Thursday.

The board said that 26 awards totalling $80,439 were given out during February. Under the act, anyone who is a victim of crime in B.C. can apply for compensation.

Bus shelters on the way

More bus shelters are on the way, Ald. Robin Blencoe said Thursday.

The public works committee chairman said 40 will be built this year, at a cost of $68,000.

Only 10 were erected last year under the program.

The Urban Transit Authority has agreed to share the costs of construction, Blencoe said.

B.C. ferries to get new boss

By JAKE BANKY

The corporate carpet has been yanked out from under B.C. Ferry Corp. general manager Charles Gallagher by Transportation Minster Alex Fraser.

The minister announced a decision to hire a full-time board chairman who will take over-all responsibility for the Crown corporation.

The effect will be to limit seriously the free hand Gallagher has had in running the service.

Gallagher wasn't in his Victoria office today and he wasn't returning phone calls.

Fraser, the current chairman, will retain his seat on the board as government representative.

The minister indicated the decision was in part a response to Gallagher's handling of problems within the corporation.

But he denied that it was a slap in the face for Gallagher.

"We are very satisfied with Mr. Gallagher. We're trying to give him help and the board help by hiring a working chairman."

Asked about his reported dissatisfaction with the general manager over continuing poor labor relations in the B.C. Ferry Corp. Fraser replied:

"I haven't said that. I've heard that, but I haven't said that."

The Vancouver Province earlier quoted Fraser as saying the move was partly due to Gallagher's handling of his ferry duties.

"There've been terrific problems for the corporation, yes," Fraser said.

The newspaper also quoted one source close to Fraser as saying the minister spent more time with ferry employees than Gallagher and that the minister and other directors were unhappy with Gallagher's tough attitude towards both union and nonunion ferry workers.

Other sources cited unhappiness with Gallagher's implementation of a management team concept as yet another reason for the decision to hire an outsider.

Fraser said the new chairman will deal with policy while Gallagher will continue in charge of operations, said Fraser.

"It's my understanding that in the industry, Mr. Gallagher is considered the best operator on the Pacific coast — as far as an operator is concerned."

The minister had no word on who will get the top job in the corporation.

He said a short list of candidates has been prepared but he hasn't seen it yet.

He would not confirm that Halifax lawyer J. Graham Day, a man with extensive experience in shipping and transportation, is at the top of the list.

Fraser, meanwhile, has given the city of Victoria more representation on the ferry corporation's board with the appointment of Ald. Bob Wright and former mayor Mike Young as directors.

The board now has representatives who live in Victoria, Vancouver, the Sechelt peninsula and Prince Rupert.

"I think we have the best-rounded board that we've ever had," Fraser said.

Ted Franklin almost fell off his chair Wednesday when he read the Times.

The reason? A photo that helped him track down a long-lost childhood chum he hadn't heard from for nearly 60 years.

Franklin, 68, of 2143 Granite, said he got the surprise of his life when he read the caption under the photo of a piglet nosing out two pups for a meal on its surrogate mother, a collie dog.

The caption said the animals belonged to Uda Davis, a Silverdale, Wash., hog farmer.

To Franklin there could be only one Uda Davis.

He had to be a member of the Davis family which had a farm next to his family's near Lewistown, Montana, between 1919-1921.

The clue was the first name — all of the seven Davis children were given three-letter christian names ending in 'a.'

But Franklin wasn't sure until he phoned that night.

"Do you remember a boy named Terrence Franklin?" he asked.

"Do I," came the reply. "We used to chase gophers together."

A reunion is planned this summer.

Vancouver landlords charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two west end landlords were charged Thursday with 145 counts of unlawfully increasing rents.

The charges, which involve 30 suites in three apartment blocks, result from raids rentalsman officers made last month on Aquilini Construction and Zen G Construction, Rentalsman Jim Patterson said.

It is the first time the Rentalsman has ever tried to prosecute a landlord for illegal rents.

Patterson said he wants to let landlords who illegally increase rents beyond the seven-per-cent allowed under rent controls know they could face stiff penalties.

"I'm attempting to make it clear that a greater liability than simply paying back rent exists," he said.

Patterson said he also has pointed out to the provincial government that rent controls of seven per cent are below the current inflation rate of 10 per cent.

Luigi Aquilini, president of Aquilini Construction, wouldn't comment, and nobody at Zen G Construction was available.

One man's futile fight against debt collector

By WALTER STEWART
FP News Service

OTTAWA — The telephone rang in my Ottawa apartment early on the morning of Jan. 25, and a voice asked if I was Walter Stewart.

Guilty.

"Then you owe the Royal Bank $202.39," said the voice, whose owner represented an Ottawa collection agency.

I told him he had the wrong customer. He wanted to know if I had ever lived in Winnipeg, and when I said I had not, he wanted to know if I worked for a news service. I do, and he said, "I have information that you are the Walter Stewart who owes this money."

I said: "Then you have the wrong information," and hung up.

At first, it seemed funny, but then my wife pointed out that if I had a collecton agency on my tail, my credit might be impaired. So I sat down and wrote a stern letter to Rowland Frazee, president of the Royal Bank in Montreal, asking how I got on his hit list.

On Feb. 15, Frazee replied that he "appreciated" my writing to him (I'll bet) and that I would hear from him "as soon as I have received a report."

I have not yet heard.

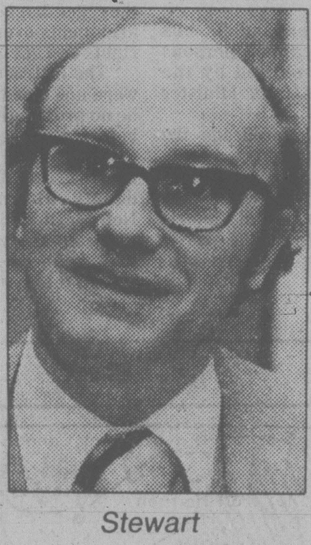
A few minutes after I put this letter down, I got another call from the collector, who identified himself as "Mr. Kerr, with Financial Collection Agencies" and who wanted me to pay up forthwith. I told him again that he had the wrong chap, and he asked if I worked for "EP News Service."

I said, "No, FP."

He said, "Whatever," and went on to repeat that he had information that I was the same Walter Stewart who had beaten the bank out of 200 bucks.

I raised my voice in denial. He said, "I guess we're going to have to settle this in front of a judge," and I said that suited me just fine.

I demanded to see whatever material he had from the Royal Bank, but he would say nothing more. So I wrote Frazee again, and wrote Kerr, and wrote my lawyer, and told them all that I was the victim of a bum rap, and I wanted it cleared up.



Stewart

My lawyer told me that the only way I could clear my name was to sue. That seemed silly; this was a simple case of mistaken identity which could be resolved by a letter. But my lawyer was right.

Two weeks later, when I still hadn't heard anything, I went over to the Ottawa Credit Bureau — there is such a bureau in every major city — to see whether I had a black mark on my file.

I filled out the required form ("Reason for Interview: Threatening phone call from collection agency") and was told that "Credit-wise, you're flawless."

That was nice.

I phoned the public affairs department of the Royal Bank in Montreal and asked to talk to someone who could explain how their collection system worked, how it got me confused with someone else and — most importantly — how other Canadians were going to be protected from mixups as we move deeper into the web of computer-stored data.

Press officer Robert Racine promised to get right back to me.

But he didn't.

Six days later, on March 18, I phoned again, and he said that he had passed my request on, and that I should have been contacted long since. I said that I was coming to Montreal on March 28, and would be grateful if he could arrange an interview for me. He promised to get right back to me.

But he didn't.

On March 19 — nearly two months from the original phone call — I went around to Financial Collection Agencies on Metcalfe St. in downtown Ottawa and asked to see Kerr.

He was produced, looking young and nervous. Ian Kerr, collector.

He told me that the whole episode was "a mixup". A man with a name similar to mine had gotten onto the Royal Bank's bad books in Winnipeg with an overdraft, and the bank had turned the case over to his company there, with a note that this man, a consultant, wrote for newspapers as a freelancer, and might be in Ottawa. He said there were "a lot of similarities" between myself and this man, but couldn't say what they were.

As we talked in the lobby of the FCA offices, I could hear other collectors on the phones in the background.

"What's the matter?" one man was saying, "You on welfare?"

Another growled into a telephone: "Just because they're grinding on you, don't try to grind on me."

Must be fun work.

Kerr said he was sorry if he had been offensive on the telephone and sorry for the mistake. He said he had written to the bank in Winnipeg after he got my letter — when it apparently began to penetrate that he had the wrong man — and in a subsequent phone conversation, the loans officer there had suggested "it wasn't worth it" to keep after me for such a small amount.

I asked, "Then you mean they still think I'm a deadbeat?"

Williams denies it's different law for Indian hunters

Attorney-General Allan Williams denied today that a directive he issued on Indian fishing and hunting violations amounts to interference with the justice system.

Crown prosecutors have been told not to proceed with charges against native Indians who fish and hunt out of season, except on direct instructions from the attorney-general's office.

"Everybody complains I'm interfering with the justice system. I'm only trying to make certain that in these cases, justice is served."

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers, who is responsible for fish and wildlife, says he is surprised Williams never told him of the directive.

Senior members of the Fish and Wildlife Branch, meanwhile, are talking angrily of continuing to lay charges against anyone — Indian or white — who violates the Wildlife Act.

"With all the present controversy about the judicial system this looks bad, considering the ethic that the law should treat everyone equally," said one official.

But Williams brushed these complaints aside, saying his directive deals only with administration of affairs within his own ministry.

He said the problem arises when a native Indian shoots an animal or hooks a fish out of season without holding a special permit which allows Indians to take game year-round for food purposes.

"His tendency is to take the animal and not worry about the permit," Williams said.

"I think this can be resolved in many cases by some significant changes in the permit system."

CBC sticks to its guns

CBC regional director Len Lauk said today the corporation will not back down on its story that Deputy Attorney-General Dick Vogel interfered with the justice process in three court cases.

"After reviewing our program and the statements made in the house, we stand by our story," he said.

Vogel, who was cleared after an investigation conducted by Attorney-General Allan Williams, has announced he is suing the CBC and reporter Chris Bird for libel.

Canada's auto deficit hits $3B

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's automotive products trade deficit soared to $3.1 billion in 1979 from $600 million in 1978, Statistics Canada said Thursday.

The dramatic increase came from a five-per-cent drop in exports of automotive products to $11.4 billion and a 15 per cent rise in imports to $14.5 billion.

Meanwhile, Industry minister Herb Gray said today he will meet soon with the U.S. presidents of the big three auto makers as a prelude to formal talks with the U.S. government on the auto pact.

He said he wants to get new commitments from the car makers on increased parts production and more research and development in this country.

While he gave no date for the talks, the minister said he hopes to give formal notice to Washington by May or June. U.S. officials have already expressed opposition to renegotiation of the 1965 bilateral free trade agreement on production of new cars, trucks and parts in North America.

Gray also said he expects to meet Employment and Immigration Minister Lloyd Axworthy today or next week to study possible federal aid to unemployed car industry workers, indefinitely laid off at Chrysler Canada Ltd., Windsor, Ont., and elsewhere in the industry. An estimated 17,000 of 95,000 workers are currently without work. Some have been forced to take welfare after their unemployment insurance benefits expired.

Battle of the cats nearly over

CALGARY (CP) — Bonnie Roddis' two-year fight to keep five exotic cats she's cared for since 1975 has come to an end.

Mrs. Roddis was told Thursday the Alberta fish and wildlife department intends to remove two tigers, a lion, a jaguar and a cougar — animals she says are her family's pets — from her care immediately.

The Calgary woman has been battling with the province since 1978 when the fish and wildlife department learned she was harboring the cats illegally.

The province took possession of the cats in 1979 but allowed Mrs. Roddis to keep them as a custodian for the court, provided she could meet the requirements for a game farm permit. Mrs. Roddis has moved twice in the past year in an effort to find suitable land.

"I know I can't win now," she said tearfully. "The province never intended to let me keep these animals. They were just playing games.

"But I'll tell you one thing, I'll shoot those cats before I let them die of loneliness in some strange cage."

Her husband, Alan, a city veterinarian, stood by with a .357 magnum revolver strapped to his belt. He indicated he would use the gun to kill the animals before wildlife officials could load them onto a truck.

In anticipation of the officials' arrival at their acreage, the Roddises set up a barricade at the front entrance.

Gordon Kerr, assistant deputy minister of fish and wildlife, said officials were dispatched to the acreage Thursday and attempted to persuade the Roddises to co-operate with an order for the cats' removal.

"They refused and I can't say yet what our next step will be," he said. "But we've determined that the facilities at her acreage are inadequate and are a hazard to public safety.

"We aren't playing games. We've done everything possible over the last year to help her keep the cats. We've extended deadlines and granted her a number of concessions. However, our conditions have not been met. We've been misled."

Afghan 'Christmas' cancelled

United Press International

Afghan President Babrak Karmal predicted Thursday Soviet forces will remain in Afghanistan indefinitely and rebel spokesman said fears of renewed anti-Soviet rioting in Kabul forced the government to cancel Moslem New Year celebrations.

Karmal, in a broadcast on Radio Kabul monitored in London, said most of the Soviet soldiers would "definitely remain here as long as there is the smallest sign of provocation, interference or external aggression against Afghanistan and as long as these things are not completely uprooted."

An estimated 80,000 Soviet forces have been in Afghanistan since the Dec. 27 Soviet-backed coup installed Karmal.

In a related development, the government announced cancellation of Friday's traditional Moslem New Year celebrations in the capital of Kabul, citing bad weather.

But an Afghan rebel spokesman in New Delhi, India claimed the cancellation came after the government uncovered rebel plans to incite thousands of festival-goers into another anti-Soviet uprising like the one last month.

"It is a national festival. Usually 100,000 people or more gather from all provinces. Like you celebrate Christmas, we celebrate this," the rebel said. "The festival has never, never been cancelled in living memory. It has been held in snow and rain . . . The government found an uprising plan and is 100 per cent afraid there would be an uprising and they would have to kill thousands."

Meanwhile, Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr warned Moscow today the Soviet Union must get out of Afghanistan "whether you like it or not" because "we could not tolerate the presence of your armed forces in our neighborhood.

". . . Secondly, we could not, in accordance with our Islamic duty, see a Moslem nation under the occupation of foreign forces. Thirdly, in the light of our global duty and as a revolutionary nation, we cannot tolerate such overt aggression.

There were fierce anti-Soviet riots in Kabul and elsewhere in February, and the government charged Pakistani, Chinese and Americans were involved in planning the troubles. Hundreds of people were killed wounded or arrested.

Unconfirmed reports from rebels in Peshawar, Pakistan, said hundreds of villagers in eastern Kunar province were bombed by 50 Soviet MiG jets and 2,000 tanks in the last four days.

In all, they said six villages were destroyed, and the rebels also said they had information that the Soviets used napalm in the attacks.

In New Delhi, Indian intelligence sources said Soviets troops are training thousands of Baluchi tribesmen in Afghanistan for a spring offensive that could give Moscow direct access to the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

Western intelligence analysts believe Baluchistan — which covers sections of Afghanistan, Pakistan and Iran — may be a major target for the Kremlin in its historic search for a warm water port.

Indian intelligence sources said Soviet army officers have trained 3,000 to 4,000 tough Baluchi tribesmen in the southeastern Afghan province of Kandahar, which borders Pakistan's volatile Baluchistan province, along the strategic coasts of the Arabian Sea and the Gulf of Oman.

W. Germans borrowing from Saudis

BONN (AP) — The West German government is borrowing billions of marks from oil-rich Saudi Arabia to offset effects of a deficit in the current balance of payments, a government official said today.

Confirming earlier reports, spokesman Armin Gruenewald told reporters the government plans to borrow "under 10 billion marks." Ten billion marks is equivalent to about $5.4 billion.

Sources later reported the amount would be six billion marks.

In buying marks with other currencies and then using the marks to buy West German government notes, the Saudis will help offset an outflow of capital from West Germany represented by a 1979 current account deficit of $4.8 billion.

Waldheim warns United States against military action in Iran

Times News Services

UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim cautioned the United States against military action in Iran as freedom for the U.S. hostages in Tehran looked further and further away.

"If you think you can solve this problem by force you are wrong," because that would jeopardize the lives of the 53 captives and "create an explosion" in the entire Middle East, Waldheim told a news conference Thursday.

Waldheim, in Washington for a meeting with State Secretary Cyrus Vance, was concerned about a call by Senate Republicans for the Carter administration to consider a naval blockade and mining of Iran's ports.

Waldheim praised President Carter's "restraint and firmness." He said he was confident patience and perseverance will lead to the release of the 50 hostages who began their 139th day in captivity in the U.S. embassy today and the three U.S. diplomats who are also prisoners.

Waldheim said he is hopeful a UN investigating commission will be allowed to return to Iran after the new parliament is elected. And he said he has received indications recently that the crisis will end regardless of who wins the election.

He did not say what the indications were.

Ayatollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolutionary regime, has said the 270 members of the new Majlis, the Iranian parliament, will decide whether to free the hostages, and Ayatollah Mohammed Beheshti, first secretary of the Revolutionary Council, has said the Majlis won't discuss the issue until mid-May. But further delays in that schedule now appear in prospect.

A slow count of the votes in the first round of the parliamentary elections last Friday and allegations of vote frauds by Beheshti's hard-line Islamic Republican party are delaying the certification of those elected and those who must go into runoff elections. Election officials in Tehran said it is virtually certain that the runoff planned for April 4 will be put off until April 11 or later. This would delay the organization of the Majlis and its taking up the hostage issue.

Khomeini in a broadcast on the occasion of the Persian new year said continued complaining about election fraud is anti-Islamic.

"This is a wrong thing to say," the Shiite Moslem patriarch said. "Don't keep repeating it."

In a related development, an armed guard is reported to have been placed in front of the Canadian High Commission in Colombo by the Sri Lanka government at Canada's request.

An informed source said the move was aimed at preventing a possible reprisal against Canada's initiative in helping six U.S. diplomats escape from Iran in January.

Meanwhile, Khomeini said today the Communist world is no less a threat to Iran than the United States

Khomeini said Iran should "try hard to export our revolution to the world" because Islam "is the supporter of all the oppressed people of the world,".

Philip Anglim, who has won acclaim for his performance in the title role of The Elephant Man, appeared before a U.S. Senate Appropriations subcommittee in an appeal for research funds that might lead to a cure for disorders such as that afflicting the character he portrays in the Bernard Pomerance play. Anglim recently left the Broadway production to play the role of John Merrick in the road tour of the show. In the play, Merrick, a 19th-century Englishman, suffers from a rare genetic disease, neurofibromatosis. The disease caused tumors over much of his body and left him badly deformed. Anglim spoke of the hundreds of deformed people he has met since originating the role. "They are trapped inside bodies that don't work and aren't beautiful," he said.

Hope

The U.S. Olympic Hockey team tore up the ice when they played the Russians. Now four of the gold medalist pucksters are out to do the same with the record charts. In a complicated deal pulled together by Berlin-Carmen International Aritsts of New York, Mark Wells, Phil Verchota, Buzz Schneider and Steve Janaszak got together to lay down a track for America, America — written and rendered on lead vocal by Norman Schilt. The commemorative record — in red, white and blue vinyl — will come out later this year under a label yet to be announced.

The wisecracks flew hot and heavy — even when Bob Hope wasn't on stage. The 76-year-old master of the one-liner was in Phoenix, Ariz., to perform for the National Conference of Christians and Jews when he was asked if he'd entertain troops in a future war. The answer: "I hope it's not in Afghanistan. I've never done a monologue from a camel."

Millie Jackson made her reputation in Brooklyn — but she's not sure it's one the New York City borough wants to note. The soul singer, whose shows and gold albums contain some off-color banter, was stunned when Borough president Howard Golden called to announce Millie Jackson Day in the community where she first gained fame. "They said the borough president would be at the ceremony," said Jackson, who will perform that night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. "They said it was to set an example about Brooklyn. "And I said, 'Are you sure it's me you want? I'm the example you want?'

Dear Abby:

You would do a lot of elderly single men a favor if you would tell them to change their line when they go courting. This is the message: Most older ladies hate to cook!

So, Abby, tell the older gentlemen that the quickest way to turn a woman off is to say, "Gee, I sure would enjoy a good home-cooked meal."

But if they want to turn a woman on they should say, "I miss having company at mealtime. What time shall I call for you?"

Matchmaker

Dear Match:

Inviting a lady out to dine is better for openers than hinting for a home-cooked meal. But feeding a man is a time-honored expression of love.

Dear Abby:

I am a former ugly duckling. For the past few years I have been on a staunch self-improvement campaign. This includes diet, exercise, and instructions on skin care, makeup and hairstyles. I am 30, married, and considered attractive by most people.

A few times, my husband has given me the following compliment: "Even though you are far from beautiful, you are kind, smart and a good housekeeper."

I realize that I am overly sensitive, but I take this compliment as an insult. During a heated argument over this often-repeated "compliment" my husband insisted that in a marriage one must be totally honest about one's feelings, even if the other is hurt.

I maintain that his comments were unnecessary, and damaging to my ego, and he should have kept them to himself.

Who is right?

Connie

Dear Connie:

You are. Your husband's "total honesty" strikes me as being needless cruelty.

Dear Abby:

My husband and I were invited to my cousin's home for a gathering of friends and relatives. (About 20 people.) Food and drinks were served.

As we were leaving, we thanked our hostess most sincerely for the enjoyable evening.

About a week later, I ran into this cousin, who told me that I was the only person at her party who didn't call her to thank her again. I felt like a heel.

Abby, is this second thanks necessary? I thought thanking her when we left was sufficient.

Perplexed

Dear Perplexed:

A written "thank you" indicates the ultimate in graciousness. A phone call is next. Neither is mandatory — but both show good manners.

However, pointing out your failure shows your cousin to be more lacking in manners than you.

Confidence carves a career

By LON WOOD

The true lifestyle of Northwest Coast Indians may have been virtually eliminated in the 19th Century but current economics have at least indirectly kept native artists off the endangered species list, says Haida carver Doug Wilson.

"As kids we'd go to Rupert to fish — that was a big trip. We were treated — and acted — like second class citizens.

"Now, a lot of us are very wealthy through fishing and logging and what have you — and with wealth comes a lot of confidence.

"My younger brother and his crowd now take a jet to a rock concert in Vancouver just for the weekend — maybe two or three times a year.

"Before we felt 'I guess they're right in doing what they're doing, so I guess we belong down here'. Now we say this is wrong. We belong where we belong, and confidence has its part in keeping it so."

Wilson lives in Victoria. He is one of only a handful of carvers who work solely with argillite — a compact argilaceous rock peculiar to the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The 37-year-old artist is from Skidegate. When he first sought buyers for his argillite pieces, he needed lots of confidence.

"It was a great hassle — going place to place to place; get rejected here, there and everywhere else. It was really depressing. It usually took two or three days to get over it. I'd think 'Oh, God! Maybe I'm in the wrong business'."

Gradually, recognition came for the style he evolved through the influences of his grandfathers Henry Young and Jimmy Jones, as well as Charlottes carvers such as Claude Davidson, Pat Dixon and Pat McGuire.

"Perhaps the teacher who has had the biggest part in my progress is Ron Hamilton — the West Coast artist," said Wilson.

He also learned to weed out the high-turnover outlets who would jam his carvings between "Indian" beadwork from Japan and black velvets of children not native to any B.C. community.

"I am known well enough now that I don't deal with too many people. Fortunately I can pick and choose.

"I set my own price and just say 'This is what I want out of it . . .'"

The money he receives for his pieces never compensates fully for the creative effort.

"Everytime you carve something nice, a whole lot of you goes into it. It is really hard letting it go — but it helps if you know it is shown in a good place by someone with integrity on a personal level as well as in business."

Wilson has found the compromise of business and personal factors at the Art Mosaic gallery in Harbour Square. The gallery has provided him with studio space and an atmosphere which he thrives on.

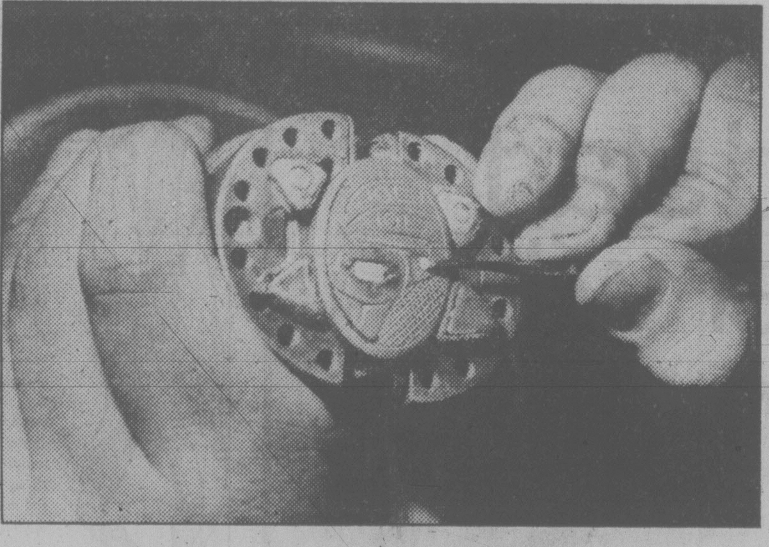
DOUG WILSON, shown above in his Government Street studio, seldom takes a holiday from his art. "Holidays? I've tried them, but you get the feeling something is missing if you don't carve a bit every day." Below he inlays an argillite brooch with pure gold. Above right, three of his totems, each of which is about eight inches tall.



"Most of the work that comes into the gallery is just gorgeous — paintings, masks, silverwork. I worked at home in Skidegate for a lot of years but you don't get too much accomplished. You're by yourself and you drink your tea and you get up and look out the window and wish somebody would drop by and visit.

"Anyway, you could make a living at home in argillite — not a very comfortable living though. The gold and silver carvers are the ones who do best up there. They can't keep up with their orders. For argillite carvers, here's the place to be — or Vancouver."

The nature of argillite is one reason fewer take to it over the precious metals, he said.

"It is just so dammn dirty — continuous dirt. Not dirt, but black. But I enjoy it because there isn't anything else I could compare with the feel of argillite. If you can master it, it's just so nice to work in.

"I get tired of the dirt every once in a while and just leave it alone — then get back to it again."

Every argillite carver has his own approach, says Wilson — and there are variations within each individual style.

"Right now I'm inlaying pure gold into the argillite — usually on the beaks and eyes. It looks fantastic. I won't say nobody has ever tried it but nobody has carried it through."

In one carving depicting sun and moon, Wilson has used abalone for the moon and gold on the other side for the sun.

"It is absolutely gorgeous — and it's fun doing things like that. Poles are sort of my main thing. I enjoy doing them but I'm at a point where I just don't want to start another one without trying something different and then going back to my old standby."

Wilson has begun work on a retrospective of his 10-year carving experience. It will be held this fall in Art Mosaic in conjunction with a major book he has co-authored on the past and present history of argillite carvers and their works.

"I'm going to try for half a dozen major new pieces for the show as well — and I've just contacted the person who has the first pole I ever did, to borrow it for the show.

The book, he said, spans over 200 years and debunks the common notion that argillite began after European contact.

"We've tried to pick out an example of each carver from about 1910 to date and expand on each and their history. We are now choosng from about 320 excellent photos from museums all over the world."

Who buys argillite?

"Just about anybody. At one time it was just the rich. Now, it's young couples who've heard so much about the Charlottes. Or they've been there and they buy items that are a part of it. They save to buy a piece — maybe the only one they'll buy in their life. It's something special."

Attitude eases hurt of hysterectomy

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Within the next six months I will undergo a hysterectomy operation. I'm far more worried about how this will affect me as a woman than I am about the operation itself. This aspect of the operation has never come up in discussions with my doctor.

Mrs. G.R.Y.

Dear Mrs. Y.:

I must ask you if you deliberately avoided discussing this problem with your surgeon. If you had discussed it, I am sure that your anxiety would have been alleviated at once. Most doctors today are psychologically oriented and have a deep awareness of the emotional problems surrounding all aspects of surgery.

Dr. Marc H. Hollender, professor of psychiatry at Vanderbilt University, made a very astute statement about your problem when he said, "The removal of the uterus (womb) is experienced as a profound assault on a woman's feelings of femininity."

It is for this reason that all aspects of the surgery and the psychological overtones of hysterectomy must be completely understood. Only in this way will you be relieved of the myths and ignorance that have surrounded this operation.

Normal, well-adjusted women who have expressed this anxiety and have had it relieved by their surgeons need not react adversely to this operation. Far too many women falsely believe that their sexual responses and their physical attractiveness will be altered after surgery. This is not true. In fact, many women seem to be relieved because they are freed of the "nuisance" of menstruation and the possibility of unwanted pregnancy.

Unless women are psychologically prepared for hysterectomy, they can be overwhelmed by a sense of depression which they do not deserve. This psychological preparation must be considered equally with the surgery.

Surgeons are aware that with psychological understanding the post-operative physical and emotional period of convalescence can be diminished in severity and duration.

Try talking to your surgeon.

Dear Doctor:

Our 4-year-old son is in good health. An X-ray of his chest showed that he has an extra rib. The doctor said it's unimportant, but I wonder if it will cause trouble when he grows older.

Mrs. L.U.

Dear Mrs. U.:

The extra rib rarely causes any symptoms. In fact, many people go through their lives without any awareness that it exists. It is during a routine X-ray that the extra, or "cervical," rib is found.

Eye-catching decor for a family room

Inside:

- Built-ins for child's room, Page 2.
- Duplex transformed into single family home, Page 6.
- Testing garden soil, Page 10.

By Pauline Graves

Even an apartment dweller can have a home as individual as a hair-do. No wall moving or ripping out has to be involved, because it is all done with furniture and accessories and the arrangements thereof. Although upholstery and stained or painted surfaces transform a conventional piece into one with its own personality, simple furniture made for a specific room or location stamps a room as unique.

A prime example is the room shown here, by interior designer Carole Eichen. In the family room, the eye-catching group consists of sofa, love seat and a corner table between them, surrounding a low, square coffee table. There is a switch here in that the upholstered pieces are plain, and the coffee table is covered with a bright patterned fabric. Usually the reverse happens. Vinyl coats the fabric to protect it from wear, and glass covers the top. The 40-inch square size and the 15-inch height relate the table beautifully to the surrounding seating pieces.

Those seating pieces are simplicity itself, consisting of 8-inch thick cushions, 32-inches wide and 35-inches deep, ranged along an 11½-inch high plywood platform. The back cushions are much smaller, the same width, of course, but about 15 inches high and 4 inches deep. For the sofa, the platform is 8 feet long, and the love seat is almost the same, except that the seat cushions cover only 4½ feet, leaving 35 inches clear, to function as a corner table.

INTERIOR DESIGN

Built-ins for a child's room

By Pauline Graves

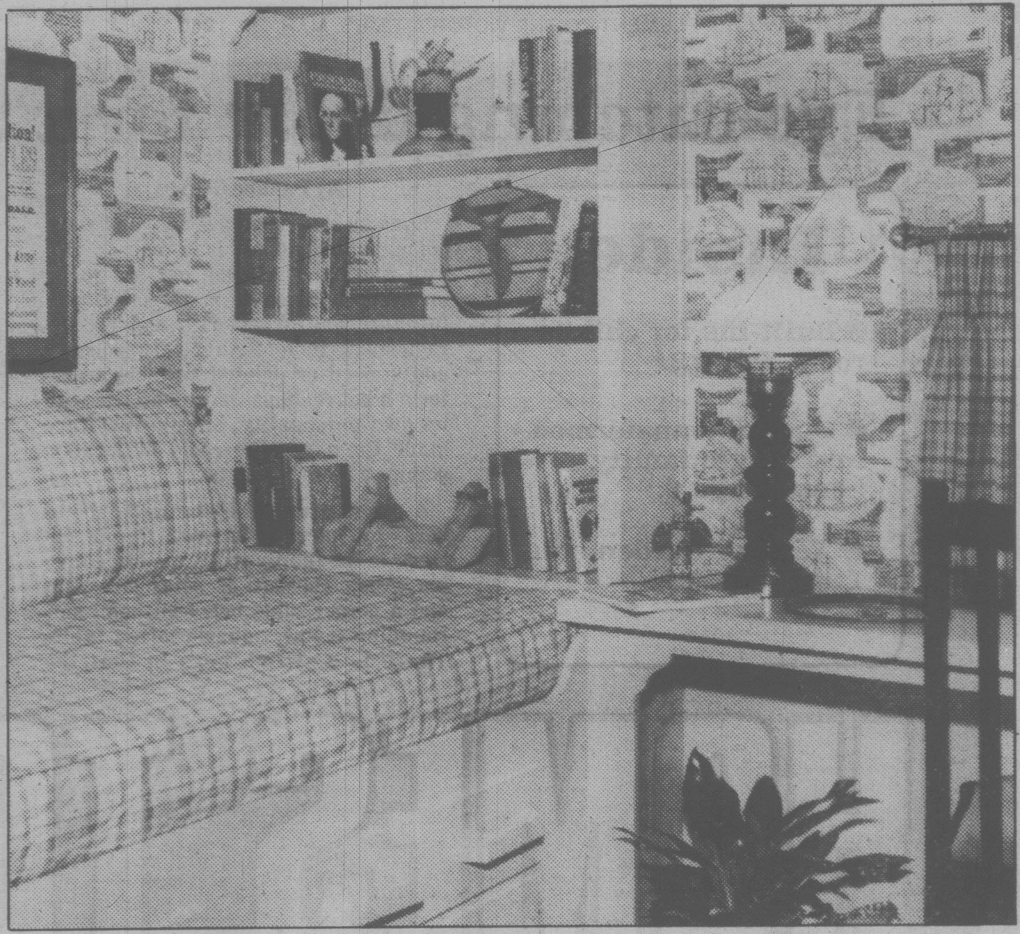
When furnishing a home, many possibilities exist for adding function and form if one is handy with a hammer and saw. Built-ins, furniture built to fit a specific space against the wall and seeming to be part of the wall, offer convenience, and they make a small room seem large because the room's centre is left clear.

A good place to start is in a child's room. A child cares little about workmanship, and generally will be happy just to have a room of his very own.

Shown here is a room by interior designer Beverly Trupp which featues built-ins, from bunk to desk; basic rectangular shapes all.

Most difficult is the bunk bed, a platform on which the mattress can be placed, and with drawers underneath. On the sides the top edge is 22-inches high, and at the foot, it is 26-inches high, the extra inches to secure the bedding more firmly. The plywood platform which supports the mattress is only 1-inch below the top edge on the side, which facilitates the making of the bunk.

Space that could have been wasted at the head of the bed, is put to work with 1''x10'' shelves, 42-inches wide, to line up exactly with the bed. And an additional shelf travels across the top. A ledge, 18-inches deep and 29-inches high, also travels across the wall and functions as a desk. Facings, 2-inches wide, add a heavy look to the bookcase frame, the top shelf and the desk's front edge.



If you go to a lumberyard with a list of exactly what you need to construct shelves and built-ins for your home, they will almost always cut the pieces to your measurements, a great time saver.

Testing garden soil

Copley News Service

As your thoughts turn toward spring and planning your garden or mowing the lawn, take a few minutes to prepare a soil sample.

Some of your gardening troubles may be due to poor soil or improperly prepared soils. A soil test will show any major deficiency and provide a guide to a soil-building program. The better your soil, the better your plants.

A soil test will tell you three major things about the sample your submit. It should show the pH reaction, this is whether your soil is acidic, alkaline or neutral. The test also determines the amount of phosphorous that is readily available to the plant. The third major thing a soil test will show is the amount of potassium available for use by the plant.

The soil test is only as good as the sample you submit. To make sure that you take a sample that accurately will represent your lawn or garden, keep in mind the following statements. Use clean plastic buckets and tools when sampling.

Several different tools such as a soil-sampling tube, soil auger or spade may be used in taking soil samples. Scrape away surface litter and sample to a depth of four to six inches taking about five cores or slices in a 100-foot-square area mix these together, keeping about one cup of soil.

Now that you have your sample, place it in a plastic bag and label it with your name, address, and sample identification.

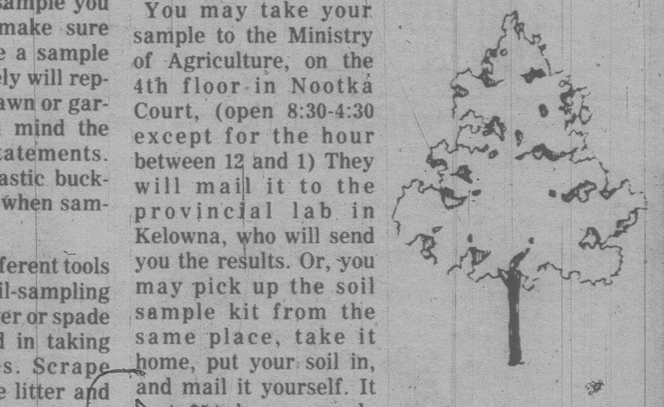
You may take your sample to the Ministry of Agriculture, on the 4th floor in Nootka Court, (open 8:30-4:30 except for the hour between 12 and 1) They will mail it to the provincial lab in Kelowna, who will send you the results. Or, you may pick up the soil sample kit from the same place, take it home, put your soil in, and mail it yourself. It costs $5 to have a sample analyzed.

Soil-testing kits for do-it-yourself chemists who don't want to wait for results are available for about $15. Kits that test for acid alone cost about $6.

Tips for planting trees

A tree is a big investment at today's prices. When you plant it you want to be sure that it will continue to look good and grow well.

Here are a few suggestions from a nurseryman:



First, prepare the hole for planting. For an example, we will use a hole three feet square and three feet deep.

The soil removed from this hole should be mixed with two cubic feet of compost or humus mulch and one-half pound of pre-plant fertilizer (2-10-4) or bone meal.

For the best start, select quality nursery stock.

If you support the tree with a stake, place it on the southwest side of the trunk: this will prevent "summer sun scald."

To be sure that the tree gets enough water, build an irrigation basin around the tree.

This should be at least six to eight feet in diameter and eight inches deep — and will allow deep soaking.

Trees are better off if not planted in lawn areas.

Take care of that tree to make sure it will grow and grow and grow!

Dining room buffet.

They bought a grey stucco duplex, returned it to brick single family home

By ANNE SWANNELL

When they bought in 1974, this house was still suffering from the ravages of a 1950s conversion, during which it received a coat of basic grey stucco over its brick lower half, had its stairway partitioned off, and a kitchen put in upstairs, in order to adapt it for two-family use.

Five years and un-told hours of work later, it was the kind of house people driving the Dallas Road tourist route stop to admire. In summer, its smart red brick, cedar siding, and spanking white paint are complimented by rose-lined walks and flower-boxes dripping with petunias.

"When we bought the house in 1974, the lady who owned it told us it was a good warm house because of it being stucco over brick'' says Fran Saddler, who, with husband Barry transformed it to its original 1913 floor plan. They intended to do only that, leaving the outside alone, but one day, noticing that the stucco would chip off, they decided to continue. With a chisel, knocking off inch-big pieces one by one, it took a long time. Then they discovered the bricks had been painted underneath, so had them sand-blasted back to their original red with darker horizontal bands. The porch was painted a sort of teal grey to repeat this shade and tie it in.

During the 1950's conversion, a lot of things went, and went completely, like support posts between sitting room and dining room. Dark wood door frames were chucked, and replaced, as was the vogue before the nostalgia revival began, with curved-corner plaster doorways. Pink imitation brick planters were built in. Linoleum covered the wooden kitchen floor, which turned out, incredibly, to be maple.

The maple color was carried out in kitchen cabinets, which Barry made from fir, stained to match the floor.

Sometimes, when people refurbish houses, they find original pieces lying around in the basement, or stored in a garden shed. But the Saddlers had to go further afield. "At the time we were building'' says Fran, "there seemed to be a lot more old houses coming down, and there were demolition sales all over the place."

Things that seem now to have always been an integral part of the house, like the sliding doors between entry and sitting room, and the built-in buffet in the dining room, came from other Victoria homes built around the same time.

The buffet, in particular, is interesting. It came from a house in James Bay, was purchased through a classified ad for old molding. Actually one piece of furniture built in to the wall between kitchen and dining room, it has been stained dark mahogany-color on the dining-room side, maple color on the kitchen side. Check the pictures, top of page, left and notice that the design is exactly the same. You wash silver, put it away in the kitchen, take it out from the dining room when it's time to set the table.

"Had I realized the immense amount of time it takes to return a house that's been 'modernized' into its former condition, I don't think we'd have taken it on'', Fran says now, though she is definitely pleased with the results. "It turned out to be a lot more work than we thought. It takes hours and hours just to get the old paint off one tiny window pane, and when I look back at pictures of the rubble we lived in when we were tearing out walls and pulling up floors, I'm amazed at what we went through, and what we've accomplished."

BELOW: What used to be an open sunporch is now a pleasant room with a view, used in the evening for watching TV. The washer and dryer are in the room from which this photo was taken. Having them upstairs, next to bedrooms is a step saver.

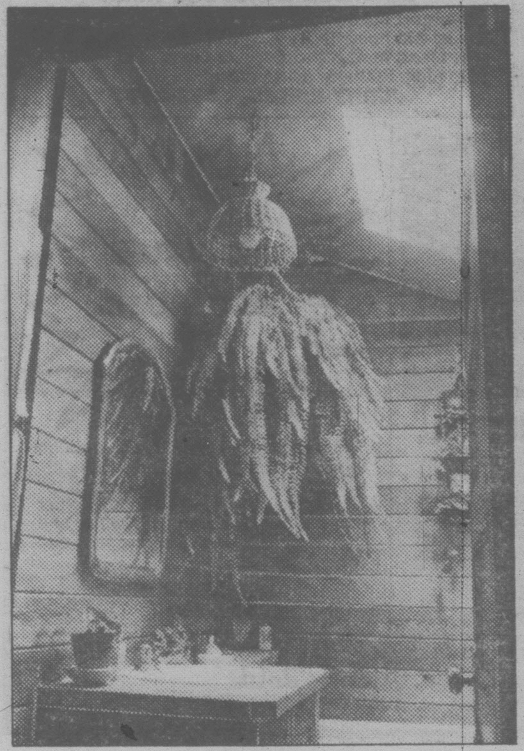
UPSTAIRS BATHROOM is finished in cedar, lit with a skylight. Its contemporary look blends well with the period look of the rest of the house, probably because of accessories such as the wood frame mirror, wicker light fixture.



Squeeking floors, flickering lights, chain saw massacre?

NOW YOU KNOW

GEORGE DALGLEISH

Q. I have a squeak in my floor that is very annoying and I want to know if I can temporarily repair it until I can get someone to fix it properly. I wonder if you can help?

A. The reason there is a squeak in your floor is that there is movement between the boards of the floor and between the joins in the plywood sub-floor. If these joins are not accessible from underneath, you could try to remove the carpet on top of the floor to make the join accessible, then it could be lubricated with powdered grahite. Powdered graphite is available from most building supply stores and in its natural state it is a charcoal color. It is also available in white and that is what I suggest you use. Try and squirt the graphite in between the squeeking boards. Once you have them, step back and forth on the area to work the graphite in. If the squeak is in the subfloor material and it is accessible in the basement area, then use a thin knife or the edge of a screwdriver to work the graphite in between the squeaking edges. If you can't find graphite in your area then use ordinary talcum powder, but it doesn't work quite as well. Remember that this is just a temporary solution and when the graphite or talcum powder works its way out of the floor then you will get the squeaking again. So when you have time fix the squeak permanently or call in a professional.

Q. We have recently installed a heat cirulating fireplace and have access to a lot of wood which we have free for the taking. My wife and I have been cutting it with an ordinary swedesaw. We would like to get a chain saw but we are afraid of the things. We understand that there have been a few accidents where people have been badly injured with chainsaws. Having had no experience in the use of chainsaws we wonder if maybe we should stick to the old swedesaw method or what?

A. Certainly the swedesaw is a safe saw to use and it certainly gives you exercise. The problem is that sometimes you get more exercise than you want using a swedesaw. If you are careful with a gasoline powered chainsaw you shouldn'gt get into any problems. The most common cause of accidents involving chainsaws is the fact that the idling speed of the motor is too fast and it doesn't let the chain stop when the machine is idling. Thus the chain continues to run at all times and if it comes in contact with your flesh or someone else's it can cut deeply. A good rule to follow when using a chainsaw is to make sure that the chain has stopped moving before you start moving. So when you are going from one tree to another or when you're moving the tree make sure that the chain has stopped before you start to move as you could trip or brush the chain against your leg when you start to move. Always keep the chain of the chainsaw sharp. This may sound contradictory especially if you are concerned about cutting yourself, but it really doesn't matter whether you cut yourself with a sharp chain or a dull one it is still going to hurt. A sharp chain will take a lot less energy on your part and use a lot less gas in the chainsaw. So like anything else, common sense and a bit of care are necessary when using a chainsaw.

Rockers comfort body, soothe spirit

The rocking chair is the one item of furniture that is a "loner" in the world of furniture

It doesn't belong in a suite. There are no matching pieces or coordinated groups.

It has a relaxed feeling that matches its function, letting it settle in with virtually any type of furnishings.

It is a growing new staple in millions more North American homes every year.

The rocking chair has returned to the scene from which it had its beginning well over two centuries ago. It owes a good part of its comeback to expanded public interest in the 1960s when President John F. Kennedy put one in the Oval Room of the White House.

President Lyndon B. Johnson was presented with one during his tenure. President Jimmy Carter brought six new rockers to the White House balcony. Since then, millions of Americans have joined their presidents in rocking their troubles away, and Canadians have followed suit. Sales of rockers have been rocketing because of the growing interest in a more leisurely style of living. It is in keeping with today's new lifestyle.

Rocking can be high-priority therapy for back trouble. Medical authorities say it relaxes the back by changing small muscle groups used in daily activities.

One report notes that a rocking chair can be the next best thing to walking for keeping the legs and feet in shape. While bringing physical comfort, it simultaneously soothes the spirit.

"Our earliest sense of security is associated with the rocking motion," says psychologist Simone D. Zelner. She points out that the first security is associated with the fetus rocking in amniotic fluid followed by the instictive rocking motion of the mother's arms and the soothing movement in the cradle, carriage and chair.

The rocking chair is a "cradle-to-grave" symbol. It has been used by the nursing mother and again by the so-called front porch retiree. Now, it is for everybody in the house.

At Pulaski Furniture Corp. of Virginia, which propelled the rocker craze with the introduction of its Keepsakes golden oak rocker three years ago, the sales graph has soared. The company has added to its collection with platform rockers similar to the old veranda gliders that were a hallmark of front porches a generation or so ago. It is now styling rockers for eclectic use from different periods of history.

REJUVENATE AN OLD FINISH and add new life with a protective coating of antique oil finish. It will save time and energy, as well as increase the value of the piece of furniture. This and other hints for looking after antiques are contained in a free 16-page booklet called "Tips on Wood Finishing". Write to Minwax Co., Dept. AN, 41 Oak Street, Clifton, N.J., 07014.

Dear Mr. Gibbons:

As a busy team of realtors, we have found Homes Today a very effective means of advertising.

Amongst others, we advertised the home at 3145 Midland in Homes Today, February 22, 1980. We received a gratifying number of calls from it, and, we are happy to say, we sold the home.

We had several calls from out of Province purchasers too, which goes to prove what a far reaching medeim of advertising it is.

We will continue to use your excellent "HOMES TODAY".

Sincerely,
